

Unrest Study Sees Need for Cooperation

WASHINGTON — A study of conflict at San Francisco State College concluded that the nation's college campuses may become closed, guarded camps unless faculty, students and administrators learn to work together.

The report, issued Tuesday, was prepared for the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence.

It said the student disorders: —Reflected larger social problems troubling all Americans;

—Should not be attributed to outside agitators;

—Were essentially an attempt by students to seize power for political purposes.

The study was the latest in a series of staff reports made for the commission, established by President Lyndon B. Johnson following the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. The commission itself, headed by Dr. Milton Eisenhower, had no comment on the San Francisco State study.

The report, titled "Shut It Down?—A College in Crisis," dealt specifically with turmoil at San Francisco State College last fall and winter but drew conclusions about the overall campus scene.

"The extent to which San Francisco State and other colleges are able to act decisively and swiftly needs examination and steps must be taken to bring president, faculty and students truly together in critical periods," the report said.

Public Opinion

"Unless this is done," it said, "an overriding public opinion may force the conversion of San Francisco State and other colleges into screened and guarded camps, institutions of learning in name only and in reality isolated from the mainstream of American life."

The report also said the revolutionary banner carried by the students "mirrors the turnout... and the economic and social imbalances which bitterly divide the American people today."

"It is misleading to attribute the causes of violence to outside agitators," the report continued. It said the turmoil had obscured the real reasons for the disorders.

That conclusion differed sharply with recent statements of Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover who have put much of the blame for campus unrest on militants who travel from college to college promoting trouble.

Eastern NC May Get New Judge

WASHINGTON — Another federal district judgeship for Eastern North Carolina may be in the Nixon administration's tray of appointive goodies.

But the $33,000-a-year judgeship would be "temporary" in that once the first appointee retired or died, the post would not be refilled.

The temporary judgeship, which would be filled by presidential appointment with Senate approval, is provided in an omnibus federal judgeship bill approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee is run by Democrats and they knew full well that the 70 new federal district judgeships it proposes would go largely to Republicans if past precedent holds true.

But Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., argued that mounting judicial business "makes urgent that new judicial manpower be provided."

The original bill proposed a permanent new lifetime judgeship in the Eastern North

Choates Amoco Service Station Is Recipient of Special Award

R. L. CHOATES, proprietor of Choates Amoco Service, at Holloway and Alston Avenue, has been presented the Appearance and Service Award by the Marketing Managers Club of Excellence of The American Oil Regional Office in Atlanta, Ga., it was announced here this week. The award is for having the cleanest and most outstanding appearance of any other Amoco station throughout the city.

The award is based on a survey conducted by Amoco Regional Representative from Carolina district, which now has two permanent judgeships. The committee amended the position to temporary.

The present judgeships are divided between a Republican and a Democrat.

Faith in Court Vindicated by Powell Ruling

NEW YORK — Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, hailed the United States Supreme Court's ruling invalidating Adam Clayton Powell's exclusion from the House of Representatives as a "welcome vindication of the faith of those who regard the Court as a bulwark of civil rights and liberties."

Commenting on the Court's historic 7 to 1 decision handed down on June 18, Mr. Wilkins noted that Representative Powell, duly elected by his Harlem constituents, "clearly meets the qualifications set forth in Article I, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States," being over 25 years of age, an American citizen for more than seven years and a resident of the state from which he was elected to Congress.

The decision was written by Chief Justice Earl Warren as his last major blow for civil liberties before his retirement at the end of this month. The decision overruled a prior decision by Judge Warren Burger who, as a member of the Court of Appeals, ruled against the Powell petition. Judge Burger has since been nominated and confirmed as successor to Chief Justice Warren.

Dissenting from the majority opinion was associate Justice Potter Stewart.

Negro Women's Club Central District Names New Members

The North Carolina Federation of Negro Women's Clubs' Central District has elected a new slate of officers, Mrs. F. T. Newsome, State President, NCFWC, announced this week.

Mrs. Helen R. Jones, Durham; has been named president and will coordinate the activities of the district.
