A DAY AT THE RACES — Youngsters' competitive urges are all focused on tiny metal cars scooting down plastic tracks at Drew Junior High School races sponsored by teachers. Adults learned to provide supervision only, allow kids to run their own races.

THEY'RE OFF — Boys are intent on start of Hot Wheels race (note car beginning downhill run, lower right) at Drew Junior High School in Los Angeles, California competition. Racing was set up as elimination tournament, with surviving winners taking home prizes donated by friend of school.

Auto Racing for Youngsters Biggest Thing Going for Summer

NEW YORK — Summer arrived officially on June 21, followed by small boys on wheels.
 The biggest thing in auto racing these days — at least for the summer recess set — seems to be the smallest thing going: tiny metal racing cars boosted along on flexible plastic tracks by powered Super-Chargers.
 These racing kits make it possible for a kid to have Indianapolis or Sebring or Riverside or Le Mans in his own backyard. He can be A. J. Foyt or Jack Brabham or Bruce McLaren — or all of them — all by himself.
 But it's more fun when he can get into real competition with the rest of the gang. And that's what competitive toy-car racing is all about.
 Just before summer vacation started Peter Nichols, a teacher at Drew Junior High School in South Central Los Angeles, got a bright idea — to set up an extensive track layout for racing on a really broad scale, with all the boys in the school participating.
 He managed to persuade a benefactor to supply the equipment he needed for his grand scheme, and took over the boys' gym after school one day. After about 25 boy-hours of setting up and testing the layout, he opened the doors and a tidal wave of youngsters came pouring in.
 Participants were registered in the eliminations and the races started. The kids had a ball.
 "One thing I learned," says Nichols, "is that if you're having these races indoors, you need earplugs."
 Another thing he learned was that a benefactor isn't really necessary to set up competition.
 "Most of the kids," he says, "already had their own cars and track. We used Mattel's Hot Wheels sets and Super-Chargers and the kids themselves could have pooled their cars and track for Race Day."
 "I also learned three other important things. First, it's fun for the winner to receive prizes but the real fun is in the racing itself. Second, it's a good idea to provide adult supervision to avoid controversy over rules interpretations. And third, it's best to let the kids themselves set up the track. It always works better that way."

Adam C. Powell Cancels Hunter College Appearance

Representative William L. Clay, Democrat of St. Louis, Mo., will speak at Hunter College on Wednesday, July 16. He replaces Adam Clayton Powell who had been scheduled to speak on that date in the college's summer lecture series, "Can the American City Survive?" He will speak at 3 p.m. in the Assembly Hall on 69th Street between Park and Lexington.
 Clay, who will speak on "Politics, Black Power and the Survival of the City," was elected to the 91st Congress last November from St. Louis.
 Described as one of the "notable figures" in the civil rights movement, Clay is a member of the House Committee on Education and Labor.
 He served as an alderman in St. Louis and wrote and sponsored a Fair Employment Law. He is active in CORE and was formerly an executive board member of the NAACP and published a report, "Anatomy of an Economic Murder" in 1963.
 The lecture, to be followed by discussion of questions from the floor, is open free of charge to the public.

Colonial Stores Reports Record Sales For Year

ATLANTA — Colonial Stores Incorporated today reported record sales for the first 24 weeks of 1968, but Ernest F. Boyce, president, said both sales and earnings were below expectations due to a strike in March which affected 94 of the food chain's stores in Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama.
 Sales for the 24-week period which ended June 14 were $263,626,292 compared with $254,585,171 in the 24-weeks which ended June 15, 1968.
 Net profit from operations of $2,893,744 was equal to $1.02 per share of common stock versus $3,126,375 or $1.11 per share from operation in 1968. Per share earnings are based on an average of 2,805,892 shares outstanding in 1968 and 2,800,026 shares in 1968.
 Sales and earnings for 1968 have been restated and reclassifications adopted at year-end 1968.
 Boyce said sales are expected to continue to increase in the final half of the year and "we are optimistic over earnings prospects."
 Ten new retail food stores were opened during the 24-week period and five older stores were closed. Twenty-three more new stores are anticipated during the remaining months of 1968 with ten scheduled to be closed. This would give Colonial a year-end total of 435 food stores, plus 13 drug stores.
 Boyce said the number of new stores anticipated for the year is below earlier projections because some shopping center developers are having problems in interest rates that make construction practical at this time.
 Boyce said expansion into areas outside the retail food field continued during the first half of 1968 with the development of wholesale grocery division in Atlanta and Norfolk.
 "Wholesale operations offer special promise because they will permit expansion of earnings through increased use of existing facilities without additional capital investment," Boyce added.
 Colonial's institutional food business continues to grow, along with the Galaxy Drug division, Boyce said.
 Colonial has operations in the following states: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina and Virginia.

EDWIN M. DANZIGER ADDRESSES DATA PROCESSING GRADUATION

Erwin M. Danziger, Director of Administrative Data Processing at the University of North Carolina, stressed "... diligence and a positive attitude toward work" as he addressed the mid-summer graduates at Data Processing Institute here Monday evening.
 Danziger advised that "... numerous jobs are available particularly entry positions, in all areas of systems and data processing for those individuals who are technically prepared. The degree of success and progress you make will depend in large measure on the extent to which you are motivated to do a good job, as well as on the degree of skill you develop," he continued.
 Data Processing Institute, one of Durham's foremost vocational schools specializing in skill and theory courses in the computer and data preparation fields, was established in August, 1968. It is the education and training division of Information Services Corporation, a locally based computer and management services firm.
 Graduates included Bertha Wright, Linda Evans, Hilda Whitted, Phyllis Woods, Norene McCallum, Brenda Harris, Joan Melton, and Betty Ellis in key punch; and Artella Bryant and Norwood Suggs in computer programming. C. William Smith, Jr., Institute Director, stated that "we were able to locate more job openings for placing graduates than there were students graduating. Naturally, this is more gratifying to us. He added that DPT's admissions office is now accepting applicants for the July 7 classes as well as for the fall session which begins September 15.
 A number of data processing managers and personnel directors from organizations throughout the area were in attendance.
 Sam T. Spaulding, Jr., I-9-C president in concluding remarks congratulated the students on having "acquired a skill which now permits you to make a more significant contribution to your own economic well being."
