Black Educator Blasts 'Folly' of Demands for Separate Study

NEW YORK—Black militants who demand that colleges create separate study programs and living accommodations for Afro-American students "are beating their heads against the wrong wall," in the view of a distinguished black educator.

Writing in the August Reader's Digest Sir Arthur Lewis, professor of economics and international affairs at Princeton University, charges these leaders with "deficiency of thought" in demanding that colleges and universities be used to "ariditate the inferiority complexes of young black adults." Employers will not hire the students who emerge from this process," he says. "And their usefulness even in black neighborhoods will be minimal."

A more rational goal, he says, is for Negroes to focus on education that will build their economic power. "While we are 11 percent of the population, we have only two percent of the jobs at the top four percent of the jobs in the middle, and are forced into as much as 27 percent of the jobs at the bottom," he writes.

Clearly, our minimum objective must be to capture 11 percent of the jobs in the middle, and of the jobs at the top."

Pointing out that most of the top jobs in the great American corporation and institutions go to people from some 50 or 60 colleges and universities, he says: "The breakthrough of the Afro-American into these colleges is therefore absolutely fundamental to the larger economic strategy of black power."

Sir Arthur also criticizes trade union barriers, which he says "keep our people out of apprenticeships in the building and printing trades, and prevent our upgrading or promotion in other industries. "Probably the Greatest contribution to black advancement would be to break those barriers," he says. "In terms of numbers, our greatest task is to conquer the middle - getting into skilled posts, foremen's posts, supervisory and white collar jobs - through better use of apprenticeships, of the high schools and of technical colleges."

"Black in America are inevitably and perpetually a minority," writes Sir Arthur. "In all administrative and leadership positions we are going to be outnumbered by white folks, and will have to compete with them. The only way to win this game is to know them so thoroughly that we can outpace them."

any separate dormitories thus becomes for black students "folly of the highest order," he declares.

Vet's Questions and Answers

Q.—I haven't received an educational assistance allowance check from the Veterans Administration for the two weeks in June that I was in school. Will this be included in my check for September when I am back in college?

A.—The reason you didn't receive a check for the two weeks you were in school in June is that you failed to complete and return to the VA regional office indicating your Certification of Attendance Card. You must return this card not only to be paid for June but also in order to get a check from VA when you return to school in the fall.

The June check will be sent to you right after VA receives your Certification of Attendance Card.

The first check after you return to school in the fall will probably arrive in mid-November, but will include payment for schooling from the day classes resumed through October.

Q.—I served with the Armed Forces police and was recently discharged. Can I obtain on-the-job training under the G.I. Bill for the city police department?

A.—Some 150 cities have a 13-month VA-approved on-the-job training VA-approved on-the-job training program. The program generally involves academic instruction as well as practical field experience. Your city happens to be one with the approved course. Check your police department or VA office for any assistance or advice needed. Basic requirements include a personal interview by a department official, a character investigation and possession of a driver's license.

Q.—My wife and I are being divorced so I am changing the beneficiary of my government life insurance to my sister. Must I notify my wife of this?

A.—As the insured, you may change the beneficiary at any time without the knowledge or consent of a previously named beneficiary, and you may elect to have the policy paid in a lump sum or monthly.
