

Shaw University Announces '71 Finals Events

RALEIGH — Plans have been finalized for the week-end of events which will culminate in Shaw University's 106th Commencement Convocation on Sunday afternoon, May 9th at 3:00 P. M. in The Raleigh Memorial Auditorium.

On Friday evening, May 7th at 8:30 P. M. Class Night exercises for the graduating class will be held in Greenleaf Auditorium. Alumni Day activities will start on Saturday morning (May 8th) at 9:30 A. M. when alumni registration will take place in the University Union building. The annual meeting of the National Alumni Association will be held at 10:00 A. M. in the University Union Ballroom.

Alfred Newkirk, Shaw Alumni Relations Director said class reunions for all "1" classes will be held this year (from 1911 to 1961). He said the class of 1946 will also hold their Silver Anniversary reunion this year.

The University banquet honoring the 1971 graduating class and their parents, friends and alumni will take place at 7:30 P. M. in the University Union Ballroom.

Worship services for graduating seniors will be held on Sunday morning (May 9th) at 11:00 A. M. in the University Church. Immediately following the Convocation for the conferring of Degrees, at which Dr. J. Archie Hargraves, President-elect, will be Commencement speaker, the President's Reception will take place honoring the graduating class, alumni and friends of the University in the University Union's main ballroom.

White House Aide Backs Uneducated White Candidate

John D. Ehrlichman, Assistant to the President, allegedly supports Jay Lense for the Director of Minority Business Enterprise. The White House-backed candidate has no prior association with the Black or Brown movement nor with the Black or Brown business community. His only credentials are that he is a close friend and former classmate to the White House aide John Ehrlichman. Ehrlichman has not denied his support for Lense for the position, Director of the Office of Minority Business Enterprise. Stans, being the good Republican he is, will not buck the White House votes.

Ironing Out the Wrinkles

NEW YORK (ED)—You all know the game of Get-the-Wrinkle. You play it when you're ironing a special ironing job—say your husband's favorite shirt or your child's party dress. You're all finished with the ironing job when you discover a few wrinkles. So you iron out the offenders, only to find you've caused new ones in another spot. The game can go on with infinite variations until either you or the iron quit.

Today we find many garments which are labeled as permanent press or "needs no ironing". However, we don't always find this to be the case.

To put an end to such games, follow a few basic ground rules. First, it's essential that you be Johnny-on-the-Spot when the wash is finished in the dryer. Remove all the items immediately. This is especially important with permanent press articles. Place the items directly on hangers or fold them as you remove them from the dryer. Allow them to cool before putting them away.

If it is still necessary to get the iron out, remember that fiber companies often recommend certain temperatures for fabrics containing their fibers. Celanese, for example, recommends the acetate, acrylics, modacrylics and polyester fabrics be ironed at the lowest settings; nylon at a slightly higher setting; triacetate slightly higher still. If you have any doubt, test the temperature by pressing an inside seam.

Usually, steam pressing is all that is required to restore fabrics containing man-made fibers to their original appearance. Permanent press items may require touch-up ironing if they're not dried in a dryer. If there is danger of shining or glazing a fabric, press it on the wrong side, or use a pressing cloth or a special nylon cover on the bottom of the iron.

Ironing is far from being the housewife's favorite chore; but if you follow these tips, you'll find less garments to iron and when necessary, you'll be able to iron and get it out of the way—without any wrinkles in the clothes or on your forehead.

Wise Shoppers Cut Clothing Costs

With the cost of living rising, everything's becoming increasingly expensive—including clothing. The wise shopper, however, can cut clothing costs simply by knowing what she's buying.

Knowing fabrics, too, can help reduce dry cleaning time and costs. By choosing clothes for your husband, your children and yourself in a man-made fiber like Arnel triacetate you can machine wash entire wardrobes. Moreover, fabrics of man-made fibers don't stain or soil easily, so the washing load is not usually heavy.

Check the information on the hangtags that are on most garments you buy. Invaluable information when it comes to laundering, dry cleaning and pressing. If the garment you like doesn't have a hangtag, you may be taking chances on it. Remember, you know nothing about the product or how to care for it.

Join the Walk for Development

On May 8 and 9, more than one million young men and women will walk — some as many as 30 miles — to raise money to help those in underdeveloped areas both in this country and abroad.

Their hike is called the International Walk for Development. Their goal: to raise $5 million.

It works this way. In each of the 350 communities where walks are scheduled this year, each walker enlists a sponsor who agrees to pay a certain sum — $10 a mile, $20 a mile — for each mile walked.

The money is then contributed to local or international development projects chosen by the communities themselves.

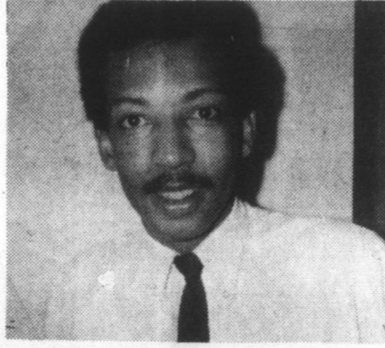

Fifteen percent of the funds raised go to educational programs of the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation, which coordinates the walks through its Young World Development arm.

Of the rest, 42 1/2 percent goes to a local development project — nutrition education in North Dakota, a day care center in Kansas — and 42 1/2 percent to an international project — CARE, perhaps, or scholarships for agricultural study in South Korea.

The walks dramatize the underlying goals of development — alleviating the despair and suffering caused by starvation, poverty and overpopulation, reversing the degradation of the environment and reducing military spending.

To find out more about starting or joining a walk, write to the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation, 1717 H Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C. or call (202) 382-6727.
