

The Disposer Is A Great Eliminator

Left-over scraps and certain inedible portions of foods are food wastes. Unless you get rid of food wastes electrically—you have plain old everyday garbage with questionable sanitation and health protection.

KitchenAid engineers of The Hobart Manufacturing Company recommend the use of a food waste disposer to eliminate such waste before it becomes "that something else". Available in batch or continuous feed models, these heavy-duty performers handle the toughest grinding jobs.

Even beef bones and stringy vegetables are at the mercy of the three phase grinding action; and if a jam should occur, the grind wheel reverses breaking the jam. For quiet operation, the disposer is insulated and cushion mounted to reduce noise and vibration. The highly resistant coatings on the grind and drain chambers give added life to the disposer in your kitchen and removes the possibility of objectionable odors.

A must for quick clean-up of food wastes, the disposer makes a perfect partner at the sink to the new Hot-water Dispenser which provides 190 degree steaming hot water for the preparation of instant foods and beverages. The two appliances make a great combination, in a work center, without moving a step.

Modern electric appliances like the disposer and dispenser make the housewife's life a little easier by giving her more time away from a clean kitchen to do the things she wants to do... and provide a higher degree of sanitation.

Students See Cracker Barrel as Symbol of Yesteryear's Grocery

Nostalgic students of Americana think of the old-fashioned cracker barrel as the symbol of the grocery store of yesteryear. But those crackers bore only a family relationship to the delicate saltines of today.

Saltine-lovers of 1971 want their crackers fresh and crispy. And cracker manufacturers have responded by tailoring their products to meet 1971 customer demands.

Typical is the improved packaging, formula and baking methods recently announced for Kroger Saltines, which have been enjoyed by Mid-western shoppers since before the turn of the century.

With summer around the corner, protection from humidity becomes a must — and Kroger Saltines are not only wrapped in individual quarter-pound stack packs, but also are enclosed in a protective polyethylene twist-tie bag.

Accompanying the improved packaging is a change in formula and baking methods to produce a crispier, flakier cracker. And, as are all Kroger baked foods, saltines are made with enriched flour.

Some things in life are so familiar that consumers seldom stop to wonder how they got that way. Typical is the saltine, a little wonder which has been contributing to the culinary happiness of most of us throughout our lives.

Saltines require exact baking skills. They are rolled out to a thickness of only one-sixteenth of an inch before baking... then must be punched with "doker holes" to keep them from ballooning out like oyster crackers during baking! They must rise just the right amount — too much and they wouldn't fit into a one-pound box... too little and they wouldn't fill the box. Weight must be exactly right, too.

Protein content of the flour, consistency of the shortening, and even the speed with which the crackers travel through the 220-foot-long oven (to bake in little more than two minutes!) can affect the texture and delicacy of the cracker.

Percy Peele, NCCU Sr., Three Times President Leaves Office.

Percy A. Peele II, a senior at North Carolina Central University, has completed his term as President of the Student North Carolina Association of Educators. The completion of his term represents the third Presidential post Mr. Peele has held in his four years of undergraduate study at NCCU. The other offices include Freshman Class President, and President of the NCCU chapter of the Student Union Education Association.

Mr. Peele spent his earlier years in Williamston N. C. and Baltimore, Maryland. He would like to return to Williamston and explore his political ambitions. These include participation in government on the municipal, and possibly the state level.

When asked what prompted him to seek such varied political offices as a collegial Mr. Peele, a History Major and Political Science Minor, indicated that he wanted to become involved in the political affairs of this country. He saw political involvement in college to be a beneficial experience. Mr. Peele said of the conclusion of his duties as SNCAE President, "I leave with mixed feelings. I enjoyed serving as the SNCAE's President, and I hope that my work in that capacity has laid foundations strong enough so that the SNCAE will make progressive gains in political and social change." "I am saddened that I will no longer be working with the members of the SNCAE, who assisted in making my administration a meaningful one."

What does the future hold for Percy Peele II? Presently, Percy plans to do graduate study at the American University in Washington, D. C. He has not abandoned an earlier ambition to become the first Black President of the United States. Peele indicated that there is room for political advancement for Blacks and other minorities in the U. S. With his honest approach to the problems that trouble the

N. Viets Hit S. Viets in Two Attacks

SAIGON — North Vietnamese forces have gone on the attack to defend the A Shau Valley. They launched two strong assaults Wednesday against South Vietnamese marines menacing their long-time operating base close to the Laotian border.

The attacks produced the first major fighting since South Vietnamese forces undertook a hesitant and so far unproductive campaign against Hanoi's valley stronghold a month ago.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported Thursday both attacks were repulsed and claimed 200 North Vietnamese were killed, some of them by P-52 bombings and other American air strikes. South Vietnamese losses were 90 men killed or wounded, according to field reports.

In other action, two U. S. political framework of this country, and the courage to stand up for his ideas Percy Peele may make his dream to become President of this Nation a reality.

fighter-bombers fired missiles at North Vietnamese anti-aircraft gun positions 80 and 90 miles north of the demilitarized zone, the U. S. command reported. Results of the attack were not known.

Meanwhile, the U. S. Command said 34 American soldiers died in battle last week, the lowest figure in more than three months.
