Negro elected to the Alabama State Legislature since reconstruction, is chairman of the region.

The convention is said to be the most successful ever held. There was a slight demonstration at the closing session, when about half of the delegates walked out, due to their dislike of the ruling of the chairman, Attorney Robert Ming, over a motion that would have changed the rules of tenure of members of the Board of Directors.

The 1972 convention will be held in Detroit, Mich., with the 1973 confab going to Indianapolis, Ind. New Orleans, La., was selected as the site for the 1974 meeting, winning over Oakland, Calif., Washington, D. C., and New York City. North Carolina voted solidly for New Orleans.

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP, called for unity among black people in an address before the organization's national convention last week in Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Wilkins said there is "a new urgency" for such unity. He added it was not just a call for blacks to get together but also "a cry for unified action to save mankind."

Over 2,000 delegates from coast to coast attended the sessions which closed July 9.

The 56th Spingarn Medal was presented to Rev. Leon H. Sullivan, founder-chairman of the Board of the Opportunities Industrialization Centers of America, pastor of Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia, and the first black director of General Motors Corporation.

A plaque commending the role of the NAACP in assuring the fullest possible count of the Negro population in the 1970 census was presented to Board Chairman Bishop Stephen G. Spottswood by Maurice H. Stans, secretary of Commerce.

Some of the speakers addressing the delegates were Bishop Spottswood, William H. Hastie, chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third District; and Andrew F. Brimmer, a member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

"I took the GED (high school equivalency exam) and passed," Reed recalls. "I waited for a while and eventually got a call from the office saying that I had a job."

Before coming to the Labor Department, the young civil servant worked as a film processor for Standard Photo in Springfield, Mass. His vocational goal, however, is to become a computer technician or mechanic.

"I like anything dealing with machinery," he said running his fingers across the keys of a new braill machine. "I was always the kind of kid that took apart toys to see how they were made."

A native of Middleton, Ohio who grew up in Hartford, Conn., Reed is also a musician. He has been playing the trumpet for 13 years and often plays with a 5-piece jazz group in local night spots.

the disadvantaged came about as a by-product of his ministry. Since his founding of the first OIC in early 1964 in an abandoned jailhouse in North Philadelphia, the movement has spread to over 90 cities in the USA and four nations in Africa and South America and has trained over 60,000 disadvantaged people from all ethnic groups of citizens.

In 1960 he founded the Zion Home for the Retired, one of the finest institutions for the care of the aged in Pennsylvania. Reverend Sullivan founded the Zion Investment Associates, coming out of the membership of Zion Baptist Church. It has completed development of a million dollar Garden Apartment Complex, the first of its kind in the east, and has built a $1 million dollar shopping center (Progress Plaza), the largest shopping center built, owned and operated by colored people in America and opened several Black owned and operated superettes known as "Our Markets."

He has more recently founded Progress Aerospace Enterprises, Inc., a large industrial development to involve Afro-Americans in the Aerospace Industry, and Progress Garment Manufacturing Company. In this program Reverend Sullivan has designed it in such a way that profits will accrue, not only back to investors, but a majority of the profits will flow back into the community to assist in educational and scholarship benefits. The Progress Aerospace Enterprises (PAE) is perhaps the first sizeable aerospace community, self-help enterprise owned and administered by colored people in the country.

Recently, and most importantly, Rev. Sullivan was appointed to the Board of Directors of General Motors. And he is already urging General Motors to pull out of South Africa, because of their racial prejudice.

DECORATING FROM AN ECOLOGICAL POINT OF VIEW

Everybody's conscious of the environment these days! We've all been warned about using phosphates in our washing machines, DDT on our crops, and lead in our gasoline. Yet, surprising as it may seem, the furnishings with which we choose to decorate may well be an even more important threat to our environment.

Not so very long ago I read an article which stated that by 1980, 80% of all the furniture produced will be made of plastic. Although this claim was undoubtedly highly exaggerated, it brought to mind a variety of problems we would all have to face, should almost everyone, in another nine years, be buying plastics—not only furniture, but for an ever-growing list of other products.

Most people buy furniture four times in their lives. This means that there must be some way to dispose of an almost staggering amount of furniture but if it's made of plastics, where will it all go? Unlike hardwood furniture, plastic furniture can only be melted or burned producing harmful pollutants in the air and leaving acid residue that can't be disposed of.

Then, too, the durability of moulded plastic furniture is still questionable. No one has as yet been able to determine the effects of time on plastics, but experts are predicting that within a ten or fifteen year period the chemical composition of the plastic will undergo change. Anyone who has ever owned any plexiglas will gladly attest to the fact that scratches are anything but an asset to a plastic surface! This means that people will be forced not only to buy more furniture more often, but they'll be spending more money, too! And with each new turnover of furniture, the disposability problem will begin all over again.

Maybe it's time that manufacturers took a more careful look at what they're making. After all, especially when it comes to costly home furnishings, we're going to have to live with them for a long time...in one way or the other!
