

Jean Knight is A Favorite Dish in the Bull City

If you take a close-up of Jean Knight, you're likely to get a double exposure. It's not the fault of your camera. It's Jean's fault. You see, she has a "two-faced" personality, and this would certainly come through on your camera. However, when you use the term "two-faced" to describe this dual personality, it isn't in a derogative manner as the term might indicate. These double exposures of Jean will be "Jean, the sports-woman and Jean, the cook." Jean has always been an outdoors woman. However, after "Mr Big Stuff" (her Gold and Platinum single) gave her a touchdown by reaching the 2-million mark, she has had little time to get out in the sports field as much as she would like. "I'm just bowling now," she says. "Mostly for exercise, you see."

She likes all kinds of "ball" games. Volleyball, tennis, baseball, softball, basketball, and table tennis are among her major interests. And unlike most women, she even likes the brutal game of football.

"But I don't play it," she says. "I just love watching it on television. The Baltimore Colts is my favorite team."

Jean recently became a race track enthusiast. "But I only go to watch the horses — they're very pretty," she smiles.

Jean has always loved cooking too, and she is known to have unusual expertise in this art form.

Her favorite dish lets you cue-in on how the critics have described her.

Her favorite dish is "Okra & Seafood Gumbo." And if you break down the ingredients of the dish, you'll see Jean's personality slipping through.

"Okra" is soul. Jean's all soul. "Seafood" usually connotes "brainy." Jean is an intellectual (in high school, she was dubbed as "brainy" and "egghead" and "those classes where I wasn't president, I was vice president," she says candidly). And "gumbo" is highly seasoned which means that it can undoubtedly be equivalent to Jean's sexiness. So you have a woman who is "all soul," "brainy," and "sexy," and you, also, have a meal fit for a "Knight." And Jean would like to share her favorite dish or rather "dish" with those who appreciate soul whether it's rare, medium, or well done.

There are many women I would never support. She ended her interview with a statement expressing her belief of the possibility of a woman in the white house by
