

Christian Responsibilities

By DONALD LOVE

People from birth grow into having responsibilities be it one way or another. Even at an early age, we are responsible for certain things.

As one grows older, one inherits more responsibility, not because one desires it, because it just comes.

Many people seek this kind of obligation, and are not satisfied without it. There are those who obligate themselves not to become obligated. As a rule, this class suffers most; if you call being dissatisfied, suffering.

In society, there are those who specialize in doing things and they are in many instances better than good. This is their life and it has become a part of their lives.

Our athletes in school are no more three letter men. They only play one sport. In rare cases, they play two and not any more.

In football, a platoon system is used. A system of specialist. A defensive team, an offensive team, a kicking team, a kick returning team. A special kick-off player, a special field goal kicker and a special punter. These players are encouraged not to take a part in any other sports. The same is true with baseball and basketball. There are many reasons why. Many boys are in school on scholarships and it is very necessary to use the bridge that is seeing them across.

As I am around seeking and hearing how things work for those who merit them, I also give right much thought on and about God's affairs.

Suppose as much effort and time was directed on God's program; His way and not your way, as it is on the way of our society, those of us who try to sing, will be able to sing: "How Great Thou Art."

Our churches should be in the forefront by taking Jesus and leading the way through the icy waters against sin, getting men to accept that Christ died especially for sinners and all of us are -- sinners saved by God's grace.

Before the apostles were saved at the day of pentecost, it was their desire to do as their Master did but fear came into their lives preventing them. After being saved after Pentecost, they were able to do all things, and they did all things. They have proof positive knowing the difference of being saved and not being saved.

Their first responsibility a true believer, follower and a disciple of Christ being born again. This, they had heard but this, they did not have until they were filled with the Holy Ghost. Now they are prepared and ready to continue the works of their Master without fear.

God is no respecter of person. He loves all and He loved us first.

In a very busy area, people walked, some just stood around. There was a rag of some sort on the ground. No one bothered around this rag. Those who saw it, it meant nothing to them. There is no telling how long this rag had been there. An artist happen to pass, saw this rag, reached down, picked it up, shook the dirt from it, found it was a sizeable piece of canvas. He carried it home, washed it clean, painted a picture on this rag and it turned out to be a masterpiece.

God does the same for us. Those we walk over, walk around, ignore, classify as a menace to society, God pick them up, shake the dirt from them, wash them clean and turn them out to be masterpieces.

The first responsibility to be a Christian, invite Christ into your life. By so doing, you fear no more, you desire to do wrong no more, you love and hate no more. Some say: It can not be done? Have you tried? I suggest try God for a while.

YOUR MIND

A Wise Idea Concerning Medication

By WILLIAM THORPE

Any pharmacist will tell you: "When a physician prescribes for a patient, the prescription is tailor-made for that particular person, and the medicine is a specific for the condition that is causing his symptoms at that exact time."

That is very important, because people that share their prescription with their relatives and friends are taking a large risk. What helped one person although they might be suffering from the same symptom, might be dangerous to another, and can cause tragedy not only that, but is violating the federal law.

Take a look on a prescription bottle that has been filled, and you will see: "Caution: Federal law prohibits the transfer of this drug to any person other than the patient for whom it was prescribed."

I mentioned that because, I've heard people tell about how different medications help them and offer some of their prescription to someone that's suffering with the same pain.

Some folks try to prescribe medications to other people during telephone conversations, telling how good certain drugs are, and how they got quick relief.

Many people have asked me what's good for headache, upset stomach, and etc. I "advise" all of them to check with a physician first, before they began doctoring on themselves. (a wise idea)

Yes, I said a "wise idea," because I could easily tell them about all the patent medicines that we see advertised on the television: And can be bought ins tors. But to stay on the safe side a person must use his mind and think.

Examples: When you need legal advice, you consult an attorney. If you plan to build a home, it is likely that you will seek the help of an architect. Doesn't it make sense, then, when it comes to the question of your most precious asset, your health, to consult your physician?

People that share or prescribe medications should try to help an individual the safe way by recommending them to a doctor rather than focusing their minds on the do it yourself method.

Finally, I believe a person should think wisely when nature gives its warning of a symptom, and consult a physician first, because he is more qualified than anybody else when it comes to dealing with your health and medication.

THANKS TO UNIT LEADERS

by E. L. KEARNEY

The magic of Scouting is that the program is staffed almost entirely by volunteers, people who do the job without pay and sometimes without as much as a "thank you."

Our scout leaders are our neighbors, the lady around the corner, the man who lives across the block. These are the men and women who make up the army of volunteers who make scouting the largest organization of its kind in the free world.

Since these volunteers are our neighbors, they they are very much like us. They are busy people like we are; probably more so. They don't have a special job or situation which enables them to have more time than we do - the truth is "They make the time."

Leaders are talented people - but they are really not too much talented than we are. The difference is that they want to be of service. Being a good leader takes time. He must attend training courses, he must study and he must want to succeed.

Leaders are people, they have obligations, family problems, because, whether you believe it or not, your sons talk over problems with Scout master or Cubleader, they would not even mention at home.

It is not easy to be a leader - for leaders have responsibilities and problems and boys are not necessarily a leader's biggest problem. Sometimes parents and their support is the biggest support the leader faces.

There are three kinds of parents a leader meets: (1) Interested Parents - participate encourages, helps and enjoys the experience of parenthood. (2) Invisible Parents, only contact is through the windshield of the car as he drops Jr., off in front of the meeting place. (3) Vocal Parents - They call to offer some small criticisms, but never offer to help. They are the first today, "with my job, with my time, with my responsibility - I could not possibly help."

Let's not take our leaders for granted - show them we appreciate their efforts.
