By JOHN MYERS

CHAPEL HILL - "The South has spent the past hundred years feeling guilty. That's just fine. But I think things would have been speeded up if the rest of the nation would have spent some time feeling guilty about some things too." Penny Micklebury, metropolitan correspondent for the Washington Post, served as one cussing the failures of the southern past at the University of North Carolina Symposium Monday March 27. Other members of the panel included Dr. Larry Goodwin, UNC historian; Hodding Carter III, editor of the Delta Democrat Times; Edwin M. Yoder, associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News; George Core. editor of the University of Georgia Press; and George Esser, executive director of the Southern Regional Council.

Miss Micklebury continued her discussion of the southern past by stating that the struggle is not over just because it has been recognized in the other parts of the country. Where is the South now? We can't sit here and watch the Supreme Court run all over Ill. or bus kids from central Cincinatti to Shaker Heights. It does not release us just because everyone else does it. So that's my question. What do we do now?"

Dr. Goodwin pointed out that the past is changing rapidly in its approach and acceptance of the wrongs committed and left unrecorded by present history books. "His torians have little faith in our college history text and no faith in elementary text books. The events that took place and the ways in which they were recorded is often extremely different."

He referred to present history teachings as "dull mythodology which passes for history." And brought out one point which no historian can overlook or fully deny: "black See Page 2A

Jordan discussed what he felt to be difference in prejudice of the 1960's and that of the 1970's. "In the 60's we were confronted with the right to ride on a city bus. In 60's." Jordon continued with the 70's it is the question of

Educational Registration By Blacks Cut Off By Officials

WASHINGTON, D. C. -Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, Chairman of the National Policy Conference on Education for Blacks announced today that registration for the fourty-day confab has been cut off and that no additional registrations can be honored because of space limitations.

The National Policy Conference on Education for Blacks is scheduled to begin March 29 at the Marriott Twin-Bridges Hotel, in Washington, D. C. It will continue through April 1 with some 600 participants from across the country.

Former Assistant Secretary of Labor Arthur Fletcher, Executive Director of the United Negro College Fund; Nathaniel Jones, Legal Counsel for the NAACP; Dr. Vivian Henderson, President of Clark College; Barbara Jordan, Texas State Senator, and Kenneth

Clark, Director of the Metropolitan Applied Research Center, are among the principles who will speak at the Conference. Some 12 other nationally recognized education specialists will also play major roles at the invitational parley. Dr. Bernard Watson, Project

Director, said that the Conference sponsored by the Congressional Black Caucus and nine other national organizations, is designed to enable blacks from across the nation to arrive at a consensus on selected policy issues and to have a better understanding of other issues. "The Conference," says Doctor Watson, will serve as a forum for the ideas and information on how best to build on the educational achievements of blacks and how best to rectify the educational injustices faced daily by black children and

STUDENT UNREST AT LOCAL SCHOOLS

By JAMES VAUGHAN

Durham recently was the scene of black student unrest as two of its institutions --North Carolina Central University and Durham College -were temporarily plagued by student demonstrations. NCCU, the first to be plagued by conflict, reported no arrests, nor injuries following several hours of student marching and chanting in front of President Albert Whiting's office and later demonstrations at the student union building.

Durham College, this week suffered broken windows, damaged facilities in the college's cafeteria and boycotted classes. to leave the college for a delayed spring break. Both incidents of protest resulted following lists of demands from the student bodies. NCCU students drew list seeking improveof medical facilities, dormitories, security measures and other grievances. According to Harvey

White, president of the Student body, "We were only after making improvements of living conditions for the students here. Our protest was not directed at Dr. Whiting, the The student spokesman con-

The statements from the students were made following letters to about two dozen students from President Whiting warning them against further demonstrations. According to students, Dr. Whiting's letter denied legitimate grievances and shows a lack of faith in us on the part of the president when he wrote "you can't try to bring about constructive changes because you'll be kicked out."

Dr. Whiting has referred to the North Carolina statue on by a fine up to $500 or six months imprisonment.

Currently, the NCCU campus remains relatively quite. Students are reported anxious to talk further with the president regarding seeking changes.

Dr. Whiting stated that "my office has and always will be waiting and ready to receive any student seeking constructive changes. I am perplexed as to why they felt the need to demonstrate rather than come into my office," he said.

"We cannot give you all the answers now. We do not have the authority or the knowledge to answer all of your questions. We will help you when and where we can at any time but some of the problems will have to evolve as plans for the county hospital develop"

Speurgon Boyce, chairman of the board of directors for the new Durham County hospital gave the above reply to the Low-Income Health Care Committee at a board of directors meeting Thursday 24 in the county courthouse. The low-income group originally listed five demands for changes in the construction of the new hospital with its board of directors and during the previous month no action has been board did not have the authority to act on several of the demands such as cite, transportation, etc. and did not have the knowledge to act on the others such as clinic space, the ultimate plans for Watts Hospital, etc.

The Low-Income Com mittee headed by Mrs. Inez Gooch, offered two major proposals at Thursday's meetings. The first proposal was to invite the board of directors, the federal officials from Raleigh, and officials from Atlanta to a public meeting to be held April 6 at 7:30 p.m. in Durham. Three members of the board for the new hospital stated they would be at the meeting. The remaining board members consented to give every effort towards attendance.

The second proposal by Mrs. Gooch's group was to offer the remaining two vacant seats on the board of directors to representatives of the low income sector of Durham John Wheeler, President of Mechanics & Farmers' Bank made the motion to consider the proposal and the motion was seconded by James Ward. The Board approved the motion

This is the position of the Committee of Concerned Blacks, a national group which came into existence recently in alarm over the growing number of Afro-Americans being wooed to South Africa.
