tate brokers, to make sure that they offer federally-assisted housing to everyone, without discrimination"; prohibition of "racial discrimination in home financing, particularly underwriting practices that have a discriminatory impact on minorities"; and refusal to permit location of new federally-assisted construction in communities that do not "enforce fair housing policies."
Further, Dr. Morsell called for reform of law enforcement agencies, the prison system and the courts; he called for establishment of a unified federally-administered and financed welfare program based solely upon need; and finally, he called for reform of Congressional procedures "to create a system more responsive to the needs of the nation's poor and minorities."

L. Stanley, chairman of the NNPA's Scholarship Foundation and publisher of the "Louisville Defender," who worked with Reynolds in formulating the scholarship program. He said the Reynolds Industries grant is the largest the publishers' Scholarship Foundation has received.
The first five Reynolds Journalism scholarship recipients will enter accredited schools of journalism this fall. Their names will be announced soon, according to Stanley. The students are selected by the NNPA Scholarship Foundation, working with the National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students. Beginning this year, and continuing for the next three years, five Reynolds journalism scholarship winners will be announced each year until a total of twenty have been selected to receive the four-year scholarships. The total cost of the seven-year program will exceed $50,000.
In presenting the check, Bass said he hoped the Reynolds program "will make a significant contribution to the needs of Black journalism and help strengthen the already influential Black media of this country."
Reynolds Industries is the parent company of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, which produces the popular Winston, Salem, Camel, Doral and Vantage cigarettes, and other subsidiaries, including Sea-Land Service, Inc., in containerized shipping; RJR Foods, Inc., convenience foods and beverages; RJR Archer, Inc., aluminum products and packaging; and American Independent Oil Company.

have been my favorite people. However, I became more deeply impressed after reading and much soul-searching upon the words found in the 33rd chapter and verse 5 in the book of Genesis, "Children are a gift of God." Therefore, I reached the conclusion that children are very special people. And there is one thing I am sure of, namely, all children can be reached through Love and Understanding. I prayerfully hope I will be remembered by the children that I have come in contact with, as a friend and someone who cares for and about them."

"I see," was an automatic response and you're pleased that Mrs. Daniels accepted the reply as one offered by one who understands and is willing to give support to her crusade.
"Do you have a basic Philosophy of life that you use daily?"
Mrs. Daniels smiled, but she made no immediate reply. You are about to conclude that her thoughts have drifted with the breezy-breeze of the late June evening and the interview was over when she began speaking in a mellifluous tone: "I have a prescription for happiness."
"Good!"
"In Life, take time to laugh. Sprinkle everything with understanding. Keep God in the center of your life. And finally, I ask, quite often, that God grant me the strength to change what I can, and give me the courage to face the disappointment of not being able to change what I can't change."

Bishop to use the truck."
"Effie Jefferies!"
"No need to panic now. It is all over now. I took a pill before I left from uptown. I knew what was wrong."
"That was dangerous. Why hadn't you taken your pills?"
"Skip it. I gave out and just didn't have my prescription refilled."
"I don't want to hear tell of you doing a thing like that—"
"Pshaw! I get tired of taking old, bitter pills. I can't swallow the things too well."
"Poor excuse, lady—"
"I know. Don't fuss me out—sugarbabe. I can't make love when I know you're angry with me."
"Has the store called about the truck?"
"I don't know. Does it matter? Kiss me, loverbird, you're losing your steam."
"I can take the truck back."
"And leave me with a headache? You're a fool, honey."
"No. My job is involved. I could call in from home and tell 'em I am sick or tell some other soul-lie. But, I'd be in a pickle if Bishop returned the truck 'n told somebody—anybody—that I'm shacking up with my girl friend for the day."
"But it's too icy out there for my loverbird. Tell 'em to go to hell. I have anything you need."
"Everything!"
"You don't have to worry about anything. I have enough for both of us."
"Effie, I'm in an awful jam—anything you can say at the moment only complicates matters—"
"Pshaw! I want to be loved." Effie pouted.

-Blackspot
Blackspot, a troublesome rose disease, is caused by a fungus that lives from year to year in dead, fallen leaves and stems. Control measure for this disease should include a good program of sanitation, including the raking and burning of fallen leaves and proper pruning of stems. Efficient control of blackspot requires repeated applications of an effective fungicide every seven days throughout the growing season.

The paper towel—it's a bacteria check-mate, and bacteria, which thrives in the kitchen, is one of the leading causes of food poisoning. So if you're concerned for the health of your family, consider expanding your existing uses for paper towels.
You might start by exchanging your sponge for paper towels. Sponges, unless they're boiled regularly to keep them sanitary, are potential germ spreaders.
A sturdy, absorbent towel such as Viva can do most of the jobs that a sponge can. Use towels for your scouring, for cleaning such critical surfaces as the refrigerator and all its trappings, the chopping board and countertop. Use towels for wiping up spills, wiping down grease splattered walls and stove, wiping off cans before they're opened.
And to further improve your kitchen hygiene, extend your use of paper towels for drying. There's hand drying... and remember hands must be washed before you work with food and again after; drying meat and poultry once it's been washed off; drying your flatware, glassware, crystal... and here the absorbency of a good paper towel speeds up the job and gives a super sparkle.
