NAACP Report Reviews Civil Rights Activities

NEW YORK—The multifaceted and continuous campaign of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to gain full equality for the Negro and other minorities is detailed in the organization's 62nd Annual Report to be released here and in Detroit on the eve of the NAACP's 63rd Annual Convention, July 3-7.

Among highlights reported for the year, 1971, were: an unprecedented omnibus suit against the State of California charging the state with failure to take action to curb discrimination within its governmental structure; U.S. District Court Judge Stephen J. Roth's landmark decision requiring district lines to achieve desegregation; NAACP aid to striking black and white pulpwood cutters in Mississippi. Also, intensified efforts in the quest for military justice, including an on-the-spot investigation in West Germany demands for prison reforms; expansion of day care center and housing programs; and a voter education and registration program which added 350,000 new voters to the rolls.

There was a slight increase in membership over the 1970 total - up to 390,238 from 361,807. Income from all sources declined by 5 per cent from 1970.

Summing up the year's activities in the 80-page report, Executive Director Roy Wilkins said: "Despite the frustrations and actual hostile acts attributable to high government officials and despite the faltering economy, the NAACP is 'no ways tired' of the uphill fight against prejudice. We expect to be in there contending (and winning) every inch of the way, just as we have, in good times and bad, since 1909."

Democrats Presented Civil Rights Agenda - NAACP

WASHINGTON — A comprehensive agenda for civil rights in 1972 was presented to the Platform Committee of the Democratic National Convention here, June 23, by John A. Morsell, associate director, of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Dr. Morsell appeared before the committee on behalf of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of 127 national organizations, including the NAACP, involved in a joint effort to eradicate all forms of racial, ethnic and religious discrimination.

Recommendations submitted to the committee called upon the Democratic Party to take affirmative action against discrimination in education, housing, employment, the administration of justice, aid to the needy, and Congressional reforms.

"The proposals we advance today," Dr. Morsell told the committee, "are expensive and far-ranging. But they are meant to eradicate even more costly consequences of segregation and discrimination ... We call upon the Democratic Party in 1972, as we did in 1968, to rededicate itself to the goal of one society."

As a first step, he said, the party must "begin by repudiating all attempts to hobble the federal courts and school officials in their attempts to achieve compliance with the Constitution." It is essential, he added, "to have a national effort dedicated to fostering integration in our public schools. We support busing as one means of accomplishing this.

The Leadership Conference spokesman proposed a six-point program "to help break the segregated housing pattern." Among these proposals were closer supervision by the Department of Housing and Urban Development of "the marketing policies of real estate

Volume Of Private Business In U.S. Largest In The World

The volume of private business in the United States is the largest in the world—some 1500 billion dollars in annual receipts.

But the more than 150,000 black-owned businesses in America account for less than five billion dollars in receipts, or less than 1% of the total.

The ABC News Inquiry special, "Black Business in White America" aired Saturday, July 1 detailed why black businesses have not flourished, and the special problems confronting non-white businessmen in a white-dominated business world.

On the ABC News Inquiry special, Rev. Jesse Jackson, prominent black economic activist and executive director of PUSH (People United to Save Humanity) offers some surprising statistics on the black business market.

According to Rev. Jackson, the 25 million black Americans, if seen as a separate nation, would be the 26th largest on Earth. The American black community, he states, would constitute the third best African nation. Further Rev. Jackson says that the American black community would be the richest black nation in the world, and would have 16th in wealth among all nations.

"I think we must appreciate the power, the inherent economic power of the American black market," Rev. Jackson says. "An economic market with that much potential," he feels, "if it is organized and disciplined, has the capacity to liberate a substantial portion of the black business community."

"I am suggesting that if Japan and Germany could come from where they were in 1946 and 1947 to world competitors by 1971 and 1972, then certainly the black American market has that potential."

A basic problem for blacks trying to go into business has been the inaccessibility of capital, a situation which is slowly beginning to change.

As narrator ABC News special correspondent Frank Reynolds concluded on the program, "of course, black Americans do have more opportunity to participate in the economic life of the nation than they ever had before."

"But, we still have a long, long way to go before opportunity is really equal."

"Perhaps we can be optimistic, in part, because money, unlike some other things, is color-blind."

The ABC News Inquiry, "Black Business in White America" was written and produced by Len Giovannitti and directed by William L. Gaddis. Executive producer was Stephen Fleischman.

Policemen Learn To Use Brain Instead Of Brawn

For the past four years Saint Augustine's College has sponsored a Policemen's Institute in Individual and Group Psychology. Police cadets met twice a year for four day sessions. They receive information from outstanding psychologists, sociologists, attorneys, community leaders and other educators. At the June 1972 sessions, held June 9-22, the first speaker for the program was Dr. Prezell R. Robinson, president of the college, who challenged the young policemen to continue to study, try to understand why people do certain things, and depend upon the use of brain rather than brawn.

Other speakers included Attorney Samuel Mitchell, whose subject was Civil Disorder. Mrs. Dorothy Allen, executive director, Wake County Opportunities, Raleigh, North Carolina stressed Community Involvement by policemen in connection with recreational activities of the young and old.

Saint Augustine's College students met also with the policemen for reaction and comments. Wanzo Hendrix, sociology instructor at the college led the discussion. In this session, in addition to becoming better informed about citizen's rights, it was felt that policemen should visit college campuses and try to establish better communication with students.

Dr. Howard Miller, professor of psychology, North Carolina State University discussed "Attitudes and Attitudinal Change." Attitudes, he said, involve relationships between people. Self identity, he said is most important for the well being of the individual. Young people, and especially young black people, who haven't had status, experience a difficult time in establishing their self worth.

"Continuing Education" was the topic of Dr. Joseph Jones, Jr.'s lecture.

Dr. Jones explained the policies and procedures for the transfer of credits and admissions to colleges. He named special programs and workshops in which policemen may become involved, which included a course in criminal justice, as well as the Policemen's Institute.

At the conclusion of the Institute, Wiley Davis, administrative assistant to the president, addressed the policemen at a luncheon. He called attention to local statistics which reveal that between 1970 and 1971, the following number of cases have increased: Murder, 30%; rape 16% robbery, 53%; aggravated assault, 12%; burglary, 15%; larceny 14%; theft, 19%. He stated that these statistics do not include the growing problem of narcotics that hit all segments of our society—black, white, rich and poor.

Certificates were presented to thirty-four policemen. C. C. Gray, special assistant to the president, Saint Augustine's College directed the institute.

policemen, "If we understand attitudes, we can predict behavior, under certain circumstances." The policemen are left to right, James D. Carver, president of the class;

Larry E. Gilliam, Bobby J. Rand and J. B. Potter. Dr. Miller spoke on Wednesday, June 21, during the Policemen's Institute, held at Saint Augustine's College.
