NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Durham City-County Charter Commission is in the process of preparing a charter providing for consolidation of the governments of the City of Durham and Durham County. The Commission has scheduled a public hearing on the preliminary draft of proposed charter to be held on Wednesday, January 17, 1973, at 7:30 P.M. in the City Council Chamber, City Hall. Interested parties are encouraged to attend. As required by Chapter 800, 1971 Session Laws, copies of the preliminary draft of available for public inspec-tion at the following places: Office of the City Clerk of the City of Durham, City Hall; Office of the County Manager of Durham County, County Office Building; North Carolina Central University Library, Fayetteville Street; Perkins Library, Duke University West Campus; and Durham City-County Library, East Main Street. Copies will also be available for public inspection at the following places: Durham College Library, Fayetteville Street; Stanford L. Warren Branch Library, Fayetteville Street; Forest Hills Branch Library, University Drive; Bragtown Branch Library, Dearborn and Ruth Streets; McDougald Terrace Branch Library, Lawson and Sima Streets; Durham City-County Library Bookmobile Unit; Library Bookmobile Unit; Durham High School; Hillside High School; Northern High School; Southern High School; Everything's coming up CARTOONS! First it was the Beatlet

then the Monkees and now the latest singing groups to become animated characters are the Jackson Five and finally the Osmonds. It seems that having a cartoon series named after you is as important as winning a gold record. There's another animated group on TV these days, but instead of a singing group, it is a family group - a modern family group, a women's libber sister named Alice and her jobless soul - searching brother. Titled "Wait Till Your Father Gets Home," this clever cartoon show adds di.Lisa Bernadette mension to the stale situation comedies that abound on the television networks this year. It is humorous and typical of the American family scene. Notice any similarities???

Getting into a college isn't too difficult, but finding the right college for you is a tough process. The important thing is to start looking early. If you are a sophomore or a junior in high school, now is the best time, and if you are a senior, you'd better hurry because you don't have much time. Send away for catalogues of schools you think you might like to attend. If they sound interesting and offer what you're looking for, try to visit them (Say on a weekend with your parents). Catalogues don't always give full details, but once you have seen the place, it will be easier to decide. Ask the kids who are presently enrolled at the school. They'll be able to tell you things a catalogue can't. Then apply. Application fees may add up, but it's worth the money to know you are being considered by several schools. The important decision is all yours, after the acceptance comes in. Think about the various schools and weigh the differences. With a concentrated effort, you will probably choose the school that is right for you.

While you are concentrating on colleges, it's a good idea to get yourself in shape, physicially as well as mentally. If you're troubled with acne, as most teens are, start a skin care routine and stick to it. Use a medicated cleanser such as Fostex to help rid the skin of oiliness and blackheads that accompany acrie. Using Fostril lotion, a medicated coverup, is a good way to get all day treatment for your skin problem. It hides blemishes while it treats them. What could be more satisfying than a clear, healthy-looking complexion when you embark upon a totally new experience?

I happened to walk past a very famous concert hall with a very famous rock group playing in side. Evidently there were no tickets left at the box office, because the 'scalpers' on the street were having a field day. For four blocks east and west of the place, there were people selling tickets for up to $30 a seat! And the amazing thing, kids were actually buying them at those outrageous prices!!!

Life Companies Show Real Estate Growth

Life insurance companies in the U.S. will have $7.5 billion in holdings of directly-owned real estate at the end of 1972, according to an estimate from the Institute of Life Insurance. This was $571 million higher than in 1971. Although these investments mount to only three per cent of total life insurance assets, they have climbed steadily for almost two decades, making possible a variety of industrial and business facilities, and housing for many families.

In 1971, investments in commercial and residential properties ac counted for 71 per cent of the tantes presented dance salutes directly-owned real estate at yearend; 25 per cent was represented to the sponsoring chapter, their by the value of life companies' own fathers and then to their marhome and branch offices: the balance by other types of real estate.
