Minorities Fare Badly In Public TV Hiring

WASHINGTON --(NBNS)-- While criticizing public television for making only "minimal progress" in improving employment opportunities for minorities, a report by the United Church of Christ's office of Communications also noted that public television had done "slightly better" than commercial television in giving women employment opportunities.

The study is the second of a two-part probe of TV employment practices conducted by the church. The first part released last fall, dealt with the hiring of women and racial minorities by commercial television. Both were based on an examination of annual employment records that stations must file with the Federal Communications Commission.

Noting that the management of public TV stations is "almost exclusively composed of male whites," the study shows that in 1972, of the 125 stations reporting, 44 -- or 35.2 per cent -- employed no minority group members on a fulltime basis. Also, last year 9.2 per cent of their fulltime employees were members of a minority group as compared to 8.2 per cent in 1971. Commercial stations reported that minority groups comprised 10 per cent of their staffs.

In addition, the report maintained that "discrimination against women, although not as widespread (as in commercial TV) will still appear."

While 52 per cent of the public stations employed no minorities in the top three job categories -- officials and managers, professionals, and technicians -- more than 18 per cent of the public TV licenses had no women in those positions. More than half the women employed were in office and clerical positions.

According to the report, 28 per cent of the fulltime employees of the public broadcasting stations last year were women, up from 27.2 per cent in 1971. The figures for commercial stations was 22 per cent both years.

The study defined minorities as including blacks, orientals, Spanish surnamed, and American Indians.

No sooner was the report released, however, than the Corporation for Public Broadcasting announced a new program to step up minority hiring by public TV and radio stations.

According to CPB President Henry Loomis, between 10 and 15 persons will be hired initially and the corporation will pay up to half the salary of each of those hired by local public stations for two years. Applications from the stations and a final decision on who will receive the grants will be determined by a committee to be headed by Dr. Gloria L. Anderson, chairman of the chemistry department at Morris Brown College in Atlanta and the only black on the CPB's presidentially appointed board of directors.

ENGAGED -- Miss Rosa Lee Jones and Donald Ray Nolen plan an April 28 wedding. It is announced by her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Jesse Jones of 608 Cecil St. The bride-elect is a senior Accounting major at North Carolina Central University. Nolen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Nolen of Beaufort, N. C. He is a senior Business Administration major at North Carolina Central University. Vows will be repeated at Fisher Memorial United Holiness Church at 5:00 p.m.

MEAT EATERS Americans will average eating slightly less red meat in 1972 than in 1971. Estimates indicate that consumption will be down 3 pounds per person, due mostly to a drop in pork consumption. Beef is up a pound or two per person, but pork consumption is down by about five pounds.

FRUIT DRINKS Two new fruit drinks have received the approval of families in test marketing areas of Texas and Ohio. They are Orange Ho and Nectarade. Both beverages were developed by research workers at the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

MISS MEBANE

S.C. State Profs Writings Are Published

ORANGEBURG, S. C. -- "The Eloquence of Protest: Voices of the 70's," an anthology edited by Harrison E. Salisbury, includes a selection by Miss Mary Mebane, associate professor of English at S. C. State College.

Miss Mebane's story of "The Jesus People" was chosen by Salisbury. It was selected because of Miss Mebane's "wise and compassionate wisdom looking out into the black world of North Carolina."

Salisbury is an associate editor of the New York Times and a well-known foreign correspondent who has written several books.

Miss Mebane has authored several works that have appeared in the New York Times. She adds the name "Liza" to her writing signature because that was her father's nickname for her.

SPECIAL SOIL

Most of the shrubs or trees you might use in landscape plants like ordinary garden soils, but a few need a special type. North Carolina State University specialists point out that plants such as rhododendrons, azaleas, mountain laurel and their relatives will not thrive in ordinary "sweet" soil. They like a more acid soil well supplied with organic matter.
