USEFUL DEVICE

Some home seamstresses may find the automatic buttonhole cutter a useful device. It has a retractable fine steel blade with special lock-in grooves that are automatically sized and set for the standard buttonhole size from 1/2 inch to 1 inch. A small cutting block is included to make cutting easy and safe, says Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist, North Carolina State University.

HORSE SELECTION

Thinking of buying a horse? North Carolina State University specialists suggest that you fit the horse to the use that will be made of it.

For example, a quiet, gentle horse that is not too spirited is best for an inexperienced adult or a child. A three-gaited horse usually is best for a beginner. A beginner needs experience riding in the three natural gaits -- walk, trot and gallop -- before he attempts to ride a horse executing more complicated gaits.

SUPPLY DOWN

A rise in export sales apparently will reduce U. S. cotton carryover this year to 4.7 million bales, the third lowest since 1952.

You and your pet

First Aid for Your Dog

The primary rule for all cases of injury is to contact your veterinarian. He may advise first aid until he can examine and treat your dog. If so, the following first aid tips will be helpful.

First, however, remember an injured dog is not your normal, friendly pet. In pain, it sometimes becomes panicky and may snap at anyone, even its master. Make a muzzle from a necktie or piece of rope. Wrap it twice around the nose, bring the ends down under the chin, tie a knot, then bring the ends back behind the ears and tie again. Move slowly and speak softly.

FRACTURES. A broken leg usually is self-evident by its unnatural position. Get the dog to a hospital promptly. Place it gently on a blanket, to be carried by two people, being careful to move the fractured leg as little as possible.

POISONING. Dogs can accidentally poison themselves by swallowing rat or insect poison, plant sprays or other poisons. Attempting first aid is risky. Forcing the dog to vomit is very dangerous in some cases. Don't take chances. Rush the dog to a veterinarian. Bring along the suspected cause or poison package if that is possible.

BURNS. These days, the first aid treatment recommended for burns suffered by dogs, as well as people, is no longer ointment, butter or vaseline substances, but ice water or cold water. This applies to all simple burns from hot water, hot grease, hot objects and other common causes. Serious burns require prompt hospitalization.

HEATSTROKE. This is most commonly caused by confinement in a car parked in the sun with the windows closed. Usually the dog is in a state of collapse; its breathing is difficult and rapid. Have someone call a veterinarian immediately. Good first aid is immersing the dog in cold water, if possible, to quickly reduce its temperature.

WOUNDS. Prompt treatment of cuts reduces chances of infection. Wash wounds with an antiseptic solution or soap and water. Dogs naturally lick their wounds, so don't use poisonous dressings. For severe bleeding, thick wads of clean cloth will control it as you take the dog to a hospital.

Remember, your pet's best friend is the veterinarian.

SKIPPY SAYS

It's Time To Celebrate National Peanut Week

Buy some raw peanuts in the shell. Roast them in the oven so that the aroma wafts throughout the house reminding everyone of the good things that come from peanuts including, of course, peanut butter. And to celebrate National Peanut Week, which this year falls on March 1 through 11, treat the kids to something new made with peanut butter. A peanut butter pie, for example. A pie to top all pies, a Chocolate Cream Peanut Butter Banana Pie. How's that for a pie-ful? Nutritious, too. The peanut butter in the pie contributes protein and niacin, a B vitamin. The eggs and milk add more protein plus minerals and vitamins and the bananas still more energy, minerals and vitamins. So when you celebrate National Peanut Week with Chocolate Cream Peanut Butter Banana Pie you celebrate in more ways than one.

To learn more about the nutritional benefits of peanut butter, send for the free leaflet, "Eating For Good Nutrition with Skippy Peanut Butter." Send your name and address to Peanut Butter Nutrition, Box 307, Coventry, CT, 06238.
