

MISS COOKE-

Miss I. Cooke Gets Scholarship At North Carolina School of Arts

Miss India Cooke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David B. Cooke, Jr. was the recipient of a Jessica T. Fogle scholar by the school of music at the North Carolina School of the Arts. The $500 scholarship is awarded to one student in each of the four arts areas of concentration (dance, drama, music and design and production) for excellent work in arts and academic studies and contributions to campus life.

Miss Cooke, a violin major, will give her junior violin recital in May.

of Arts, established in September, 1965, is the only state-supported school of its kind in the nation. An experiment in public education, the school offers professional training in Music, Dance, Drama and Design and Technical Production, as well as a cademic curriculum for talented students ranging from junior high school through college.

Miss India Cooke, receives congratulations from Dean Nichols Harsanyi, Dean of the School of Music at N.C. School of Arts upon receiving the Jessica T. Fogle Scholar Award.

Compton's Encyclopedia, 1973 Edition New Articles, Dramatic Graphics Mark Major Revision

The distinguished reputation of Compton's Encyclopedia as one of the leading general reference encyclopedias for young people in the country is maintained and upheld in the 1973 edition. Geared to the needs

Tables have been added to such articles as Bridge and Tunnels. The largest new table in the 1973 edition — eight pages in length — accompanies the article Nobel Prizes. This table lists all winners of the Nobel prizes in physics, chemistry, physiology or medicine, literature, peace, and economic sciences; the years in which they received the prize; their birth and death dates; their nationality; and the contributions for which they were honored. The table contains 16 portraits of Nobel prizewinners.

New bibliographies were added to the major articles, and an increasing number of bibliographies have been annotated, among them the bibliographies for the new Language and Literature articles. An interesting and attractive bibliographic innovation in the Horse article has a full-page annotated and illustrated bibliography that is divided into listings of both factual and fictional books. The illustrations for the bibliography were drawn from several of the fictional works it listed. The new full-page bibliography for Dog has been handled in the same way.

About 2,000 pages of text were put into work for the 1973 edition in order to make essential improvements required to keep Compton's accurate and up-to-date. The incorporation of new viewpoints; updates in the names of institutions and organizations; data on new technical and scientific developments; current population figures and other current statistical data; the addition of revision of cross-references in text; the addition of cross-references to new Fact Entries in the Fact Index; and current events information help make this set relevant to today's world.
