Produces BIG

Aberdeen, Wash.—(HK)—If the name of the game for a booming American economy is rising productivity and conservation of natural resources, then Pec Wee mill here is a top scorer on both counts. It thinks small, looks small and produces big.

Housed in a nondescript shed at the plant here of the Weyerhaeuser Company, its crew consists of only five men and a foreman. However, it produces daily five boxcar-loads of 2 x 4 lumber and 85 tons of woodchips for pulp. Not only is that an awesome industry feat, but its name Pec Wee refers mainly to the fact that it processes only relatively small logs previously used only for woodchips, which have but one-sixth the value of 2 x 4s. Still, most of the output is in 16-foot lengths and longer.
