Binding Women's Feet To Make Them Appear Smaller

Binding women's feet to make them appear smaller was a Chinese custom for almost 1,200 years.

To create these so-called "mandarin feet," 10-foot long bandages were wound around the foot in such a way as to draw the heel and toes nearer together, making a bulge in the instep and a deep niche in the sole underneath. "The degree of deformity," writes Martha E. Mottram, MD. a San Francisco radiologist, in a recent issue of the American Journal of Roentgenology*, "depends upon the age at which binding was initiated, on the skill and perseverance of the binder and the cooperation of the young girl." X-rays of the feet of Chinese women, mostly in their 80s now, suggest that they eagerly removed the bindings when the practice was declared illegal in 1911, Dr. Mottram says.

The Lincoln Hospital School Of Nursing Alumni Holds Reunion

August, the Marriott Twin Bridges Hotel in Washington. D.C. afforded over hundred fifty Lincoln Alumni Nurses to attend a second two-day reunion. Approximately ten to fifteen classes were represented. The first reunion was combined with the school's closing activities in August of 1971 which was held in Durham, where over five hundred nurses were in attendance with classes represented back in 1915.

The Washington agenda included registration and informal greetings which led into a cocktail hour. This gave the Alumni of Lincoln Hospital the opportunity to engage in many gay and frivolous reminiscences. D.C. Regional Chapter served as hostesses for the entertainment and other festivities. It became a scene of gaiety and excitement as they enjoyed the occasion without the traditional uniforms or nursing attire.

A buffet style breakfast brought many together on the last morning of the reunion, and served as a two-fold purpose. Following the breakfast, a business meeting was held to provide an exchange of ideas from the various Alumnae. Presidents of organized chapters brought greetings. Included among them were Mrs. Ida Howe from New York, Miss Carolyn Henderson, Durham, Mrs. Geneva S. Wade, Washington, D.C. Several areas which had no organized chapters such as Virginia, West Virginia, Illinois and parts of North Carolina had representatives who offered suggestiions for a stronger organization.

Words of encouragement were given by Mrs. Lucille Z. Williams, Director of Nurses at Lincoln Hospital. Closing remarks for the business tour of the Capital City.

A closing dinner was held during the reunion which found Dr. LeRoy Swift, gynecologist, and who is now a special assistant for HEW as well as having formerly served at Lincoln Hospital, bringing a very challenging message titled "Women". Platform guests for the occasion were Mrs. Nellie Clemens, mistress of ceremonies, Mrs. Geneva S. Wade, who brought greetings from D.C. Chapter, Mrs. Clara Payton Williams, who gave the invocation and Mrs. Irene Young, who introduced the speaker.

Recognition was extended to Mrs. Lucille Z. Williams in the presentation of an honorary plaque by Mrs. Gloria Armstrong of the D.C. Chapter. Mrs. Williams has been affiliated with the Lincoln Hospital School of Nursing since 1945. Following this, a memorial service was held and the repeating of the Mizpah concluded the program.

A fantastic social hour was enjoyed with the compliments of the Courtney Brooks Band, along with refreshments in the most colorful setting. Lincoln Alumnae and their guests offered a multi-colored setting as they partook in the festivities at hand.

Another Lincoln reunion is anticipated in 1975 as they look to recaptured Lincoln spirit and the cherished memoirs will be recanted again.

Nearly twenty Lincoln Alumnae and their families from the Durham Chapter attended the affair. Durham Chapter has approximately thirty active members. Officers of the Durham Chapter include
