Balloting Heavy For Father of Year Contest

"Who is your choice for the Father of the Year?" a The Carolina Times reader was heard asking a friend yesterday. For a contest that doesn't have any congressional or senate seats at stake, voting was reported exceedingly heavy during the past two weeks.

According to the contest panel of judges, persons prominent in community affairs assigned to select the winners, the selection will remain in doubt right down to the voting deadline, September 26. The decision of the judges is final.

The contest is co-sponsored by The Carolina Times and Greyhound Lines, Inc. All readers of The Carolina Times who want to give recognition to outstanding men for their service to the community and home-life, may nominate their choices.

When ballots were first received on the opening day of the contest, September 14, 1973, it was apparent that there were many choices for Father of the Year.

The winner and two runners-up will be announced and honored at a special luncheon September 28, 1973 at Downtowner Motor Inn.

Nominations have been received, according to the judges, for men from all phases of community life in Durham. They said readers have nominated men in such fields as family life, social work, community relations, politics, and the professions.

The panel of judges includes: Ralph Hunt, Chairman- Executive Director Durham Business & Professional Chain.

Jarvis Martin, Vice Chairman- Director of Management and Technical Service, Durham Business and Professional Chain.

Ed Stewart, President United Durham Incorporated.

Fred McNeil, Executive Director of Operation Breakthrough.

R. Kelley Bryant, Assistant

Secretary North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Joe Black, Vice President-Special Markets, The Greyhound Corporation, and Chuck Smith, Assistant to the Vice President- Special Markets, The Greyhound Corporation, will host the September 28th luncheon. An award will be presented to the winner and similar tokens to the runners-up.

If you haven't voted yet, it isn't too late. There is no restriction on the number of times you may vote. Voting may be done on the ballot included in this issue of The Carolina Times or on a facsimile which is acceptable. Each ballot should include the name of the nominated man, his business or home address, and tell why he should be considered for the award. Only men living in the Durham area are eligible.

Dr. Proctor is Keynote Speaker At Virginia State Convocation

PETERSBURG - Dr. Samuel Dewitt Proctor, former president of Virginia Union University in Richmond, who is now serving as pastor of the famed Abyssinian Baptist Church in New York City, told a crowd of more than 1,000 attending the 1973 formal opening convocation at Virginia State College that our forefathers have already paid the price for many of the freedoms which we now enjoy.

Dr. Proctor said that this was no time in life for Blacks or anyone else to be thinking of leaving this country to start a new society elsewhere because our lives are deep rooted in this land which our forefathers made possible for us to live and enjoy.

"Some Blacks have paid a price for the freedom we now enjoy. We don't have them all, but we have some, and we will obtain more, and we have come a long way," Dr. Proctor said. He continued "Wherever something good is going on, Black folks ought to be there."

The noted educator warned his attentive audience that Blacks should never want to leave a society that they have worked so hard to build. He then went on to say that separatism is not the way toward progress. He referred to Booker T. Washington as an example.

"Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, was not an Uncle Tom as many would have you believe. His idea of teaching crafts instead of classics was a sound one and important to Blacks at the time he advocated this," Dr. Proctor added.

Dr. Proctor told his audience that tension in American society is a sure sign that the country is straining to come together. "Persons previously left out of the 'action' are being considered for the first time because of this creative tension," he said. Dr. Proctor, who is also a professor of education at Rutgers, the State University in New Jersey, noted that Blacks have been attempting a re-integration process from the edge of society since 1955.

"This is good for the country and for us, for I think Blacks everywhere should be wherever the action is and wherever something good is going on."

Dr. Proctor spoke for 25 minutes to an attentive audience in Virginia Hall auditorium at Virginia State College and his address was interrupted on several occasions with applause.

Dr. Proctor, the keynote speaker at the convocation Monday night, was introduced to faculty, staff, students and friends by Dr. Wendell P. Russell, president of VSC. Dr. Valmore R. Goines, vice president for academic affairs, presided.

A former student at Virginia State College, Dr. Proctor is a native of Norfolk and spent his freshman year on the VSC campus. Later he transferred to Virginia Union University in Richmond and graduated with a bachelor's degree. He earned his master's degree from Crozer Theological Seminary and the doctorate from Boston University. Further study was done at the University of Pennsylvania and Yale University.

Dr. Proctor is widely known throughout this nation. He has served as president of Virginia Union University and North Carolina A&T University in Greensboro, North Carolina. In 1966, he published the book, "The Young Negro in America, 1960-1980". He also recently served as a visiting lecturer at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga.

Appearing on program with Dr. Proctor in Virginia Hall Auditorium were Rev. Harold E. Braxton, Buckley Gamby, Mrs. Maryanna McElroy, Miss Anita Price, Clarence E. Whiteman and the deans of schools and divisions at Virginia State College. These include Dr. Thomas C. Bridge, Dr. William S. Edmonds, Dr. Hunter D. Hamlett, Dr. Arnold R. Henderson, Jr., Dr. Harry A. Johnson, Dr. Samuel A. Madden, and Dr. Edward W. Whitlow.

Dr. Walker H. Quarles, Jr., vice president for administration, also appeared on platform.
