Taking the oath for the first time were Mrs. Strayhorne, James Hawkins of Durham, and William Sessoms of Durham, who are new to the NCCU Board. Also taking the oath were seven members of the former board, including Armstrong, Clement, Dr. Robert E. Dawson of Durham, Dr. George Debnam of Raleigh, Dr. Charles V. Holland of Raleigh, E. K. Powe of Durham, and Shreve.

Milton Lewis, president of the NCCU Student Government Association, took the oath as an ex officio member of the board. Unable to attend the first meeting were Mrs. Edmund M. Cameron and Milton E. Harrington of Durham.

The board members heard reports from the school's academic deans, the vice chancellors for financial and academic affairs, and the chancellor, Dr. Albert N. Whiting.

Before the meeting, most of the board members had met for lunch with the chairmen of the university's various academic departments.

The discussion will cover the need for better financial management and controls, adequate accounting systems, the timely payment of all area that will receive coverage is the fact that many minority businessmen do not fully understand the sensitivities and attitudes of the financial world, and therefore do not know how to deal successfully with the financial people.

The 73rd Annual NBL Convention, headquartered at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare, will be the largest in NBL history as the organization is undergoing a restructuring of philosophy and goals, under the leadership of president Berkeley G. Burrell.

This year's theme, "Making It Happen," is the underlying thought as the National Business League strives to become THE national minority multi-trade association. The convention program has attended to respond to the needs and desires of a broad-based clientele, and to cater to the priorities of the affiliate groups.

The panel discussion, "Money: Where It Is, How To Get It, How To Use It," will take place on Wednesday, September 26, from 2:30 p.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Several prominent and successful Chicago and national minority businessmen will participate in the panel discussion.

The National Minority Purchasing Council will hold one of its regular meetings during the convention, and there will be a joint meeting of the NBL Committee for National Policy Review.

The National Association of Minority CPA Firms is holding its annual convention in conjunction with NBL, the first step toward the possibility of many minority associations meeting in conjunction in the future.

CONTEST

The judges will make their selection of the Father of the Year from the hundreds of nominations submitted by The Carolina Times readers. The judges' decision will be final. Ballots for the election will appear in each issue through September 22, 1973.

This is not a popularity contest.

The winner and two runners-up will be honored at a luncheon September 28th. Each will receive awards.

Making the presentations will be Joe Black, Vice President-Special Market, The Greyhound Corporation, or Chuck Smith, Assistant to the Vice President-Special Markets, The Greyhound Corporation.

Who may nominate the Father of the Year?— Each Carolina Times reader may submit his nomination. There is no restriction on the number of times a reader may vote. Facsimile entry blanks are acceptable. Each ballot should include not only the candidate's name, but his address (business or home) and the other qualifying details. Space is available on each ballot to list reasons supporting each candidate. Readers may attach additional information.

In making your nomination, candidates should be considered on the basis of paternal participation at home and leadership in community activities. Only men in the Durham area are eligible for the award. The Carolina Times offices have received many nominations since the contest began officially last week. The voting deadline is midnight September 26, 1973.

SCHOOLS

(Continued from front page) unrelated to any large organization. Secondly, there exist older private and parochial schools which have no or only a minuscule number of black students and teachers, but profess to be non-discriminatory.

However, South Today does report "the known existence of about 150 segregation academies in Mississippi, more than 100 in South Carolina, at least that many in Louisiana, Georgia and Alabama, and 50 or more in Tennessee—including 35 established in the past three years in Memphis alone— makes it safe to estimate that at least 1,000 private schools have been opened in the eleven Southern states in the past decade to provide white students with an avenue of escape from public school desegregation. Their combined enrollment probably totals between a quarter of a million and half a million students."

(By comparison, approximately 20,000 public schools serving about 11.5 million students are operating in the same eleven Southern states.)

A recent study of the segregation academy movement in several Southern states by the Division of Legal Information and Community Service of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund (LDF) points out that "church bodies, state and local governments and Internal Revenue Service are aiding, directly or indirectly, the movement."

TECH

In describing the program, Martin noted that program coordinators from the school will be working with local industrial and business firms to locate available positions and to develop jobs for the unemployed and underemployed persons.

"At the same time we will be recruiting for the program those individuals who desire employment," he added.

Part of the educational phase of the program will emphasize teaching the individual reading, writing, and mathematics skills which will suit each student's individual need.

"The skill building portion of the educational program is aimed at human resource development, not actually providing the student with specific job skills," Martin added, "This simply means orientating the student to the world of work, helping him or her to find and maintain a job, providing consumer education, providing experience in such areas as test taking and interviewing, and most of all, helping the student understand himself and how to get along with other people in a work environment."

Follow up will be made after the student is placed on the job and will be extensive, Martin advised.

"Our coordinators will be in contact with the employee after his first day on the job, after his first week, month, six months and so on," he said. "We also plan to maintain a close check with the employer as the employee progresses."

Martin said the program has been well received and quite successful in other locales.

Previously, six pilot programs have been offered within the community college system in North Carolina. Durham Tech's program is one of 28 such programs that have received funds provided by the General Assembly.

"We anticipate and hope that this program will be of benefit to the unemployed and underemployed in Durham and the surrounding area," Martin said.

After three years in the United States Army, Jones earned a M.S. Degree in 1962 from North Carolina College, Durham, in the field of General Business. He has done further study at Atlanta University in Accounting, and attended Law School for one year at North Carolina College.

Jones comes to Durham College with experiences in the area of Institutional Financial Management, having been formerly employed at Jackson State College as Controller and Chief-Fiscal Officer. He served as Chief Accountant at Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Ga. for six years and one year as Business Manager at Miles College, Birmingham, Ala.

Jones has previously served at Savannah State College, Savannah, Ga. as Internal Auditor and instructor in accounting.

He is the son of the late Rev. J. W. Jones. His mother, Mrs. Annie B. Jones, is presently employed at Fort Valley State College as a counselor.

Jones is married to the former Precious Staton of Oak City, NC and is the father of one son, Frederick, Jr., two daughters, Myrdon and Renate. Presently, Mrs. Jones is employed at Durham College. Jones is a member of the St. Mark AME Zion Church.

COMMISSION

(Continued from front page) shoulders of Blacks and the poor of this state. Seven (7) Blacks and only four (4) whites are now condemned to die in this state.

The Commission for Racial Justice call special attention to five cases of which we propose to aid these victims of society in obtaining new trials:

Tommy Noell convicted of rape in Orange County, Aug.

24, 1973.

Samuel A. Poole, convicted of burglary, Moore County Aug. 24, 1973.

Alton James Henderson convicted of rape, Alamance County, also charged with first degree burglary, September 7, 1973.

Isaac Sherrill Monk, first degree murder in New Hanover County, Aug. 24, 1973. Christopher Spicer, convicted of first degree murder, New Hanover County, September 12, 1973.

We will aid Mr. Noell, Mr. Poole and Mr. Henderson because we contend that it is barbaric for the state to take the life of rapists and burglars. Secondly we strongly believe that because of the racial and emotional natures of these indictments, that the defendants could not have received fair and impartial trials. As in the cases of Isaac Monk and Christopher Spicer of Wilmington, N.C. convicted of first degree murder, the evidence is overwhelming that prosecutor Jay Stroud and Judge Walter W. Calhoun in concert made a mockery of justice. As usual, Jay Stroud created witnesses by putting jail birds in the defendant's cells then claiming that Mr.

Spicer and Mr. Monk each confessed they were guilty. Similar tactics were used by Mr. Stroud to get convictions against Rev. Chavis and the "Wilmington 9".

MEAT COSTS

The economy of a cut of meat depends on the amount of cooked lean meat it provides as well as the price per pound. Cuts of meat may vary in the amount of lean, fat, gristle and bone they contain, observes Mrs. Ruby Uzzle, extension consumer marketing economist.

MAYOR

something to help my people, so I was determined to keep up the fight."

Ms. Foley launched an inspired campaign for mayor, carrying on a door-to-door vote getting strategy with her five children. She recalls, "It was hell! Some people opposed me because of my past. Others because of my limited education. And still others questioned my ability to effectively address the public. But the greatest objection was because I am a woman."

In spite of slurs, snubs and humiliating remarks, she continued and won over the male incumbent by a narrow margin of 30 votes.

The mayorship of Taft, Oklahoma, a Black community with a population of 600, is not a salaried job. It pays a token salary of $100 per year, but Ms. Foley devotes full-time to the position. "I go to the office every morning and spend at least eight hours each day, just as though I was receiving an adequate salary. I pledged my full time for at least two years, and I intend to keep that promise," says Mayor Foley. One of her first projects is cleaning up the city and she hopes to do this with a small grant received as part of the federal government's revenue sharing plan; in Taft's years of existence, this is the first time the town has ever received any federal funds. Her next project is to bring some type of industry into the city to provide employment for its citizens.

Mayor Foley would not divulge any details about long-range political plans to Essence; she is not even sure she will run again, but we get the idea she has her eye on higher ground—perhaps a seat in the state legislature. And, to build a firm foundation for this lofty goal, she has expressed a desire to return to school for additional study in political science and government administration.
