Adopts Most Aggressive Set Of Resolutions

Delegates to the 30th annual meeting of the N.C. State Conference of Branches, held here October 24-27, adopted the most aggressive set of resolutions ever formulated by the militant body.

Even though there were resounding notes of impeaching the President, the committee resolved to have no part of such a procedure. The criticism of the nation's chief executive was enounced in the following resolution.

"We deplore the ideology of President Nixon's federalism. We would have it known that it is not new, but a replay of what we have long since experienced in North Carolina. Even though we have had no choice, we unreservedly say to Mr. Nixon that his federalism eats at the very core of democracy and we call upon him to cease being racially biased and fulfill his promise to bring America together. This means he must reverse his field and carry the ball, instead of being the quarterback, calling plays that keep our backs to the wall, on the one-yard line. We reaffirm our zeal and stated position to protect our goal against all the deceptions he might

Claims AASCU Members Face Major Issues

Dr. Albert N. Whiting, the chancellor of North Carolina Central University (NCCU), says most small, state-supported colleges and universities favor the retention of low tuition rates.

Whiting said he thinks almost all of the 325 state-supported institutions that belong to the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) are opposed to a recommendation by the Carnegie Commission that state-supported colleges and universities raise their tuition rates to the level of private schools.

Whiting will assume the presidency of the AASCU at the closing session of the association's annual conference next week in San Diego, Calif.

The NCCU chancellor said most of the members of the AASCU are schools with enrollments ranging from 1,000 to 12,000 students. Many of the institutions are converted state teacher's colleges, although a number of the members, including NCCU, were never teacher's colleges.

Whiting said all of the AASCU members are interested in the financial issue "because we all cater to a student body which is not affluent."

Whiting was asked in an interview about the Carnegie Commission's recommendation that extensive financial aid programs be combined with the increase in tuition.

Despite the availability of extensive financial aid, Whiting replied, the increase in tuition would make the small, state-supported institutions indistinguishable from the private schools.

The result, he said, would

Highest Juvenile Fire Heroism Award Presented S. Carolina Boy

BALTIMORE, Md. — The nation's highest award for juvenile fire heroism, the Hartford Junior Fire Marshal God Medal, recently was presented to a 14-year old Rock Hill, S. C., eighth grader who pulled a blind man from a burning house. Joe Hutchinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hutchinson received the medal and a paid-up $5,000 life insurance policy during opening ceremonies of the International Association of Fire Chiefs convention at the Baltimore Hilton Hotel here.

Last April 15th, young Hutchinson was playing basketball when he noticed flames shooting from the roof of the home of John Every McCoy, half a block away. Joe raced to the burning house to find that a man had already tried to enter, but had been turned back by the intense heat.

Undaunted and unconcerned for his own safety, the lad charged inside, knocked a board out of the way, moved a dresser, and finally reached the unconscious, 55 year old McCoy. "I had to drag him out by the hand," said Joe. "The roof and walls were burning." A few days later, John McCoy died.

The Gold Medal was presented by Chief L.L. Kenney of Miami, Fla., president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, who praised Joe for "ignoring his own safety for the sake of a stranger." John J. Butler, Jr., general manager for the Hartford in Baltimore, presented the paid-up $5,000 Hartford life insurance policy (See HEROISM Page 7A)

N. Carolina State Clean Water Bond Act Faces Voters Nov. 6th

One of the questions facing North Carolina voters in the November 6 election is approval or disapproval of a technical amendment to the State's Clean Water Bond Act of 1971.

Adoption of the amendment would release about $30 million for helping local governments build or improve wastewater treatment facilities.

The $30 million is part of a $50 million allocation set up by the bond act to meet Federal requirements for State matching funds for local projects which were approved for Federal assistance. About $20 million of this allocation has been committed for this purpose.

Late last year, however, Congress eliminated the matching requirement. This action had the effect of freezing the $30 million balance in the account, since the money can be spent only for matching grants.

The 1973 General Assembly authorized a referendum on a proposed amendment to the bond act which would allow the State to use the $30 million for grants for local projects rather than restricting their use for matching Federal

Final Session of 62nd Cape Fear Conference Hears Appointments

WILSON — The final session of the Cape Fear Conference, which was held here, October 23-28, closed with the reading of appointments, after the best meeting held during its 62-year history, by Bishop Herbert Bell Shaw, in the auditorium of Darden High School, 3 p.m. Sunday.

More than 2,000 persons were in attendance for the closing day. Bishop Shaw preached the morning sermon. He warned that the world, including America, needed to come to the realization that Iziah had when he exclaimed "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw the Lord" He called upon the audience to see the Lord and become involved in true Christian discipleship. He said that such discipleship did not end with going to church, paying dues, but extended to participation in political, civic and social welfare.

He alluded to the fact that the conference took out a life membership in the NAACP, at the behest of Chas. A. McLean, state field director of the N. C. (See CONFERENCE Page 7A)

Registrar Del Adams said the institute had 1,236 curriculum students this fall as compared to 1,188 curriculum student enrolled for the fall quarter of 1972.

Kyle Jones, director of student services, noted that 50.4 per cent of the student body was female. Currently the school shows 623 females enrolled in sixteen of the eighteen programs offered.

Of the total number of curriculum students 525 percent are white while blacks comprise 46.6 percent of the student body. There are 10 Oriental students in attendance and one Indian student.

Jones added that the 379 students registered in the business education division comprised the largest area of enrollment, followed closely by enrollment of 278 students in allied health programs.
