

The Greeks Had A Word For It: Protein

The Greek word "protein," which means "first or primary," is an "in" word today. It's important to all of us because protein is part of every cell in our bodies. And, as with calcium, protein must be ingested daily because it can't be stored in the body.

Like school, there are all grades of protein. But high quality protein comes only from animal sources and contains amino acids which can't be manufactured or synthesized in a test tube. Meats, dairy products, poultry and fish are basic sources of this high quality protein.

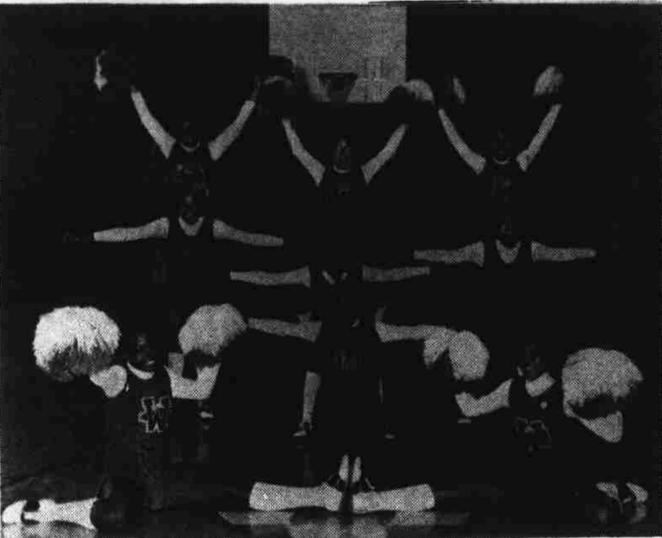

In our editorial opinion, protein is a thin sounding word and should be colored blue. High protein diets are more than a fad in the United States today, they're a way-of-eating life. But how can we maintain our proper protein level in the current inflationary period with the threat of "protein shortage" resounding around the world?

The best way is to rely on the Basic 4 Food Group to supply protein necessary for your family's health. Use bread crumbs and wheat germ to stretch ground meats into meat loaf; cottage and mozzarella cheese can supply the missing protein if you put less meat in the lasagna. Cheese can extend your food budget by replacing ounce for ounce some of the meat you're not eating.

Cheese and tomatoes will fill in for the missing meat in a spaghetti sauce. Milk and eggs can put protein power back into your French-toasted, low-on-meat sandwich. Or extend servings by adding peas, mushrooms, pimiento and white or cheese sauce to chicken-a-la-king or a tuna casserole.

Another tasty way to get your daily protein is to drink it. Two-thirds of a glass of milk provides the same amount of protein as an ounce of meat, poultry or fish. If you prefer, you can add milk, the natural food, with no trimming, peeling or waste, to cereals, canned soups or main dishes.

With pennies buying less, it makes good sense to shop comparatively for protein the same way you do for any other product. When you do, you'll find that with the exception of vinegar, milk is the lowest priced consumable liquid food of the 8,000 products found in your supermarket. Remember, the cast and players of the Basic 4 Food Scenario are the same. Only the protein roles have been changed to protect your food budget. The last word, Greek or otherwise, is protein.

WHITTED JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL CHEERLEADERS - SECOND PLACE WINNERS: The Whitted Junior High School Cheerleaders placed second in their division at the Southeastern Cheerleading Workshop in Greensboro. This workshop was directed by the Dynamic Cheerleader Association, Kansas City, Missouri.

Over 30 squads competed in this event and the competition was very stiff. Each cheerleader received a Certificate of Honor.

In the dynamic field of youth leadership their Association is dedicated to the following goals.

*To initiate exciting challenges in an effort to help cheerleaders attain their highest potentials.

*To radiate a special spirit in effort to help cheerleaders develop increased enthusiasm and establish friendships.

*To teach and share the most worthwhile and effective cheerleading techniques.

*To promote self-improvement, insight, and dedication to the highest personal, as well as cheerleading standards.

Mrs. E. M. Johnson and Mrs. P. P. Cobb extend congratulations and thanks for such a fine performance and also for such a great representation of Whitted Junior High.

USDA Lauds Programmer For Timely Suggestion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30—Mrs. Bertha E. Jackson, a computer programmer for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Foreign Agriculture Service, who congratulated Mrs. Jackson for "excellent work which has benefited us in FAS as well as the Department, the exporter, and the American farmer."

In addition to the certificate and a $225 check from USDA, Mrs. Jackson was given an Outstanding Achievement and Administrators. The award was presented "in recognition of distinguished work in the United States Government, exemplifying in an outstanding manner the highest characteristics of public service through paperwork improvement and simplification."

Also receiving the award from the management association were Helene Patridge of FAS management, and Gerald Sheldon, market development, both members of a team assigned in 1971 to the task of automating the direct mailing of agricultural trade inquiries to U.S. firms.

In the summer of 1972, Mrs. Jackson suggested that a newly-developed computer form be used for the direct mailing inquiry. Based on this suggestion, a new processing procedure was developed and put into operation in May, 1973. Mrs. Jackson had "a significant part in the development of the overall system," an FAS newsletter said.

Mrs. Jackson began her federal career in 1942 as a GS-2 tabulator equipment operator in the Treasury Department. She worked for 21 years with the Patent Office before transferring to Agriculture Department about three years ago.

She said this was her first suggestion in 30 years of government service. "I had an idea for one many years ago, but my supervisor talked me out of it," she smiled.

Mrs. Jackson rose from her GS-2 job to her present GS-11 post, which pays over $15,000 annually, by working hard and taking training courses at every opportunity. She studied computer programming at the USDA Graduate School and took other job-related courses during her 30-year career.

"I try to tell all the young people to go into Federal service," she said. "It offers many opportunities, but sometimes you have to look for them and always you have to prepare for them."

Her daughter, Brenda Kelley, a Howard University graduate, is an auditor in the USDA Office of the Inspector General in Hyattsville, Md.

HOME FASHIONS

As the interest in Americana, ethnic designs, classic casuals and the natural look continues, greater emphasis is being placed on detailing of home fashions. Denims, dots, gingham and patchworks are receiving attention via ruffles, border designs and delicate embroidering, says Mrs. Edith McGlamery, extension house furnishings specialist, North Carolina State University.

TAPE FASTENERS

When washing garments or home fashions with Velcro tape fasteners rather than zippers or buttons, be sure to close the tapes before placing in the washing machine. This will prevent the tiny woven nylon hooks from picking up lint during laundering.

PURPLE MARK

Once again shoppers will find the round purple mark indicating meat has been government inspected. The earlier dye was discontinued due to questions regarding its safety. But a new dye -- violet # 1 -- has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration, says Mrs. Ruby Uzzle, extension consumer marketing economist, North Carolina State University.

Head of Burlington Firm Arrested For Threatening Internal Revenue Official

GREENSBORO--The president of a Burlington textile firm was arrested Friday (12-7) by federal officers after threatening Internal Revenue Service employees attempting to seize company property for non-payment of taxes.

John R. Owens, 37, president of Owens Textiles, Inc., Burlington, was taken in custody by Inspector John Larabee of the IRS's Greensboro Office of the Southeast Regional Inspector. Larabee was assisted by Deputy U.S. Marshal Joel Wetherington.

Owens was charged with threatening and intimidating Revenue Officers during an official seizure of company equipment for non-payment of employee withholding taxes owed the government. The alleged incident occurred December 6 at the Owens Textiles plant in Burlington.

Owens was taken to the Guilford County Jail following his arrest. He waived a preliminary hearing before the U.S. Magistrate on Saturday (12-8), and was released on his own recognizance pending trial.
