Northern High Gridder Signs At Livingstone

SALISBURY—Livingstone College Bears' assistant football coach Andrew Littlejohn yesterday signed 19 year old tackle Patrick Mulkey to a grant-in-aid which is renewable over the next four years providing Mulkey produces both scholastically and athletically.

Mulkey, who is a two-year varsity letterman and a senior at Northern High School in Durham, made honorable mention on the all-conference Big Six 4A Conference last year.

The 6-1 220 pound Mulkey, is expected to strengthen the Bears offensively. He has the potential to make the varsity his first year, according to Littlejohn.

Mulkey told this writer that he turned down offers from four other colleges because he prefers the small college atmosphere at Livingstone. He said the possibility of playing on the varsity his freshman year also influenced his decision.

Commenting on her son's skill at tackle, Mrs. Hurley Mulkey said, "For the first man he lets get past him, I'll whip him."

Nathan Garrett To Seek Second Term As County Commissioner

NUL Director Declares Nixon Plan Deficient

Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, today outline a National Health Program whose goal is "to insure that each and every person, regardless of race or income or geographic location, has high quality, comprehensive, dignified medical, dental and mental health care, for institutionalizing a double standard of health care, for not dealing with "the special health problems of urban and rural poverty areas," and for not dealing with the urgent necessity to increase the numbers and availability of health practitioners.

The Jordan National Health Program includes three main elements: financing, delivery of health services and education.

FINANCING—The Urban League's head called for a "School improvements, library facilities, and water and sewer line extensions among the specific projects

Nathan T. Garrett announced that he will seek a second term as a Durham Commissioner on the Democratic ticket.

Garrett, who is a certified public accountant and has a history of involvement in a variety of programs to aid the poor in North Carolina, stated that he feels his continued service will help assure financial responsibility within county government and provide a means of opening government up to the views of the poor and near-poor of all races.

Garrett stated that his priorities are to improve the budgeting process by checking with county employees and recipients of county services where possible before deciding on budgets, to obtain representation from all economic strata of the community on the various boards and committee appointed by the County Commissioners, and to promote more planning sessions among the board, county employees and taxpayers.

Blasts State For Injustices In Capital Speech

RALEIGH—"Racism and political repression is more severe in North Carolina than in any other state in this county," declared Angela Davis in a press conference held after the rally in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium. "An attempt must be made to arrest development of racism in this state which is the most malignant part of the country and, thereby, a disaster area."

In her speech Miss Davis emphasized the plight of hundreds of Black people and native Americans who have suffered injustices such as those committed against the Charlotte Three, the Wilmington Ten, Jim Grant, Charles Parker, T.J. Reddy, and the twenty seven men facing death in State prison. "There has been a concerted drive against Black men in this county," she spoke.

NCCU Law School Receives $1,500 Grant From ABA Law Students Division

The North Carolina Central University Law School Day Committee has announced receipt of a $1,500 grant from the American Bar Association Law Student Division.

Patricia Lee Henry, Chairperson of the Law Day Committee, stated that the grant was the largest single award made to any law school in the nation.

Ms. Henry, a third year law student from Greenville, said, "The grant was made to the NCCU Law Day Committee in order to maintain viability of the year round program of lectures and seminars, relating to our theme "Law: Hopes or Oppression, National Theme, Young America, Lead The Way."

Vice-chairpersons of the Law Day Committee are third year students Paris Favors, Jr. and Marilyn C.

McDonald. Paul Jones is the student A.B.A. representative. The law students have been responsible for coordination and implementation of all the programs.

The series of lectures and seminars referred to by Ms. Henry included, Dred Scott Day Observance, a Judge's Panel on the Legacy of Dred Scott, a symposium of the Future Black Lawyers, a seminar on Juvenile Justice, a Workshop on Prison Problems, Eugenic Seminar, Migrant Farm Workers Seminar, Household Workers Legal Training Program, and a High School Legal Education Program. All program proposals were drafted by Associate Professor Harold R. Washington.

Housing Fair Planned By Durham Redevelopment Commission

In a unique attempt to tackle local housing problems, Durham's Redevelopment Commission is sponsoring a Housing Fair to be held at Durham College on Saturday, February 23rd from 12 o'clock till 3 p.m.

The fair has been organized under the theme "There's A Home For You," and is designed to bring community people together with representatives of real estate agencies and public housing in a novel attempt to pinpoint housing problems and opportunities.

The fair will be kicked off by a general assembly featuring a welcoming address and introduction of the Redevelopment Commission's staff and officers.

Representatives of both private and public housing agencies will occupy individual booths, among which small groups of community participants will circulate freely. The Housing Fair's primary purpose is educational rather than competitive, and representatives will provide information about current rental, sales and subsidized housing, as well as offer counseling to those with special housing needs.

Although the fair is primarily intended for persons displaced or about to be displaced by Urban Renewal activities, (Projects 3 & 4), the entire community is invited to attend. Circulars and public announcements advertising the affair will be distributed and broadcast during the coming week.

Transportation will be provided to the fair site from three locations. Persons needing transportation can be picked up at Bells American on Lakewood Avenue, Viola's Sport Shop on South Mangum (See HOUSING Page 3A)

Concerned Black Parents And Students Formed

More than 150 black parents and students from the city and county turned out for a community mass meeting held at St. Joseph's AME Church, Tuesday evening, February 20. On a two-day notice they met in response to a recent series featured in a local newspaper, the Durham Morning Herald, in which the Durham public schools were portrayed as "jungles." Parents in the group were very upset that the problems of a few whites were played up in the series while problems faced by their children were ignored.

Members of the group felt that the use of the word "jungle" was a deliberate racial slur aimed at blacks and black students. We view the school system not as a jungle, but as a system that has inherent problems that affect our children, we refuse to accept the blame for the failure of Durham's desegregation plans, a spokesman said.

Students and parents alike were disturbed over the high rate of suspensions of black students for little or no reason. One parent remarked, "Our children are just sent home, no note, no explanation, no nothing."

The group unanimously decided to call itself "Concerned Black Parents and Students." Its first objective will be to request and secure equal space in the Durham Herald and Durham Sun, to speak to the more fundamental problems that were omitted from the Herald series. Their emphasis is that the full range of problems that plague the school systems must not be covered over. The Concerned Black Parents and Students resolved to submit a more detailed statement of concerns to the Carolina Times, in the near future, following its next meeting Monday, March 4, 7:00 p.m. at St. Joseph's AME Church, 804 Fayetteville Street.
