

Vets Widows or Totally Disabled Must Act Within 18 Months

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Max Cleland warned this week that a large number of women whose husbands died or suffer total, permanent disability resulting from their military service, will lose their eligibility for certain valuable Veterans Administration benefits if they don't act within 18 months.

The VA education benefits provide up to 45 months of schooling to eligible wives and widows and to children between the ages of 18 and 26, Cleland said.

But the eligibility of a spouse ends on November 30, 1978, or ten years from the date the veteran was found to have a total and permanent service-connected disability - or ten years from the date of his or her death, whichever is later.

Dependents of MIAs and service personnel who were captured, interned or forcibly detained in line of duty for more than 90 days may also qualify for these benefits, the VA Administrator said.

Spouses of service personnel declared missing in action, captured or detained in line of duty, are eligible for education benefits until December 24, 1980, or for ten years from the date the listing was made, whichever is later, VA said.

For a spouse intending to take apprenticeship, on-the-job or correspondence training, eligibility is based on the ten year period or October 24, 1982, whichever is later.

A child's marriage is not a barrier to the education benefits, VA said, but the remarriage of a spouse ends his or her eligibility unless that marriage is terminated by death or divorce.

Unless the child of a veteran has been accepted by an approved institution for courses leading to a standard college degree, he or she is required to have VA counseling to assist in the selection of an educational goal and program. Such counseling is available to any eligible child on request.

In addition to the types of training listed above, spouses may enroll in secondary and correspondence schools, pursued six months or more, or in schools offering farm cooperative programs. The VA will provide education-vocational counseling to spouses upon their pursued only at an approved institution of higher learning.

Eligible students may borrow up to $1,500 per academic year to pursue a college degree course or one leading to a professional or vocational objective which requires at least six months to complete.

Loans are available only to students unable to obtain student loans of the amount required under provisions of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended.

Full information on the VA dependents' education program can be obtained at the nearest VA office.
