ADMIRING GROUP — Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett, the NFL's No. 2 draft choice finds an admiring group of autograph seekers after completing his second day of workouts with the Dallas Cowboys. In a press conference recently Dorsett said that he wants to gain 1500 yards in his first season if he becomes a regular (UPI).

A&T Looks To Bruce Black, Allen Thomas For Pass Receiving

GREENSBORO A&T has an outstanding quarterback in Ellsworth Turner and the Aggies are once again expected to be among the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference and National leaders in forward passing.

This season Turner will be throwing to a pair of surehanded receivers in junior Bruce Black and sophomore Allen Thomas. Black had earned the title of "Mr. Clutch" last season after his outstanding performances against MEAC and National Black College Champion, South Carolina State, and Howard University. Black caught 33 passes for 437 yards and scored four touchdowns.

He is especially effective running short patterns and is not bashful about going into a crowded secondary. He also carried the ball 11 times for 66 yards and scored a touchdown last year.

A foot injury after the Florida A&M game limited Thomas' action in '76 and possibly cost him a berth on the All-MEAC team. He finished the season participating in seven games, catching 5 passes for 90 yards and two touchdowns. His foot is completely healed and he is expected to return to the form he demonstrated in the early part of last season.

Other players who are being counted on to maintain the Aggie passing attack include backs Glenn Holland (15 catches, 151 yards), Calvin Hawkins (3 catches, 57 yards) and speedy William Joyner (2 catches, 33 yards).

A&T finished as the 11th best passing team in the NCAA Division II last season averaging more than 192 yards per game. Turner's return, coupled with that of some outstanding receivers should help the Aggies rise in that category.

I am not glad or made that Joe Morgan makes a reported $400,000 per year for playing baseball. It seems fair for Morgan, Mike Schmidt ($400,000), Gary Matthews ($400,000), Pete Rose ($350,000) and Willie Montanez ($330,000), among others, to make their reported huge yearly salaries. Some people, some sportswriters in particular, question the amounts paid to athletes, and more frequent mention is made of a player's salary regardless of the news situation.

Fans, of their own free choosing, go and pay to see athletes perform. If sports fans wanted to contribute their money to some other interest, other than sports, they would do so. Then, based on the number of fans and amount paid, those involved in the other interests would receive the money instead of owners of sports teams and athletes.

Although the owners facilitate resources for their teams and the athletic entertainment, the fans specifically pay to see the athletes perform. The more talented and/or popular athletes are often times primarily responsible for drawing more fans than usual to athletic events. What is wrong or unfavorable to that person's value to the organization?

Anyway, much has been said and written about the income of athletes in many sports. But, since the baseball free agent extravaganza this year, baseball players and their salaries seemingly are being scrutinized more. Very often, sports stories involving Reggie Jackson include reference to his salary. An anxious environment was created just before this baseball season by some sportswriters anticipating and highlighting an adverse reaction from Thurman Munson, because his new teammate, Jackson, reportedly signed for a more lucrative contract. Joe Morgan signed big, and Pete Rose demanded and received big money. Sportswriters wrote big news concerning both.

One can only wonder how much agitation such salary oriented news causes between the sportswriters and athletes, between the athletes and fans, and between the athletes and their teammates and coaches. Even though the salaries of persons in government, business, movies and other fields are available for public knowledge, very seldom do writers covering those fields refer or compare incomes in the same manner as some sportswriters are doing now.

It has been said that some sportswriters are jealous of athletes for commanding so much money. The fans don't seem to be so envious. They continue to go and pay to see the athlete's entertain. The owners would not pay such salaries without expecting or insuring a good monetary return for themselves. If a sports writer could attract the attention of thousands to pay $1.50 to $5.00 for every article he or she wrote, then he or she would probably command compensation comparable to some highly paid athletes. What is the problem?

Round Tripper By Reggie Jackson In 10th Enough To Stop Baltimore Orioles

NEW YORK — Reggie Jackson led off the 10th inning with a home run into the right field seats, his 17 of the year, giving the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles last Tuesday night.

The Yankees tied the game 4-4 in the bottom of the 9th on pinch hitter Cliff Johnson's one-out, two-run homer off receiver Tappin Martinez.

After Martinez yielded a walk to Willie Randolph and a single to Mickey Rivers, righthander Dick Drago got Thurman Munson to ground out, and Lou Piniella hit into a fielder's choice.

The Orioles scored a run in the first and Ken Singleton's three-run home run in the third inning off Ed Figueroa had given the Orioles a 4-0 lead in a series, crucial to the managerial future of Yankees skipper Billy Martin. The Yankee skipper reportedly will be fired if the defending American League champions falter against the Orioles.

Sparky Lyle, 8-3, got the victory after relieving Figueroa in the ninth. Drago, 3-4, was the loser.

The Yankees had a runner on base in every inning against the Birds and scored in the fourth on a double by Chris Chambliss and an RBI single by Reggie Jackson. Bucky Dent's sixth homer, in the seventh, accounted for the other New York run.

The victory edged the Yankees to within two games of the first-place Orioles, and Boston, also a winner over the Milwaukee Brewers, got to within one game of Baltimore.

Jackson has been in Martin's "doghouse" for much of the season due to faulty fielding. Jackson has been accused of sloppy play and was jerked from a game because of that running feud. But with the strapping hitter, his home run power made him the hero of the New York fans with the 10th inning blast.

Muhammad Ali Earned $16 Million Last Year

by LEN LEAR

Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali has made an astronomical $16 million over the last 12 months, making him the highest paid man or woman in the U. S., according to the July issue of Money magazine.

The magazine says that Ali earned $14.8 million from boxing alone and made well over a million more from book royalties, endorsements and TV appearances. Because of his enormous wealth, the worldwide celebrity insists he will never have to depend on any white man again.

"I'm not going to the white man for a job," Ali says. "I've got too many brothers in the Muslim world. They're everywhere. If I'm in trouble, you won't see me. If I get in such shape that I'm so embarrassed, I'll get on an airplane, and I'll hit one of my Muslim nations. So I'm not going to be a Joe Louis

"I have my money in different banks. I'm not crazy. I have countries where I have loaned money to banks. Muslim banks in oil countries. They can say I've gone bananas, they can take me to court, but give me a plane ticket, and I've got countries I can go to where I already have palaces. GIVEN to me.

"One in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia; and one in Tripoli, Libya, and one in Istanbul, Turkey. They remodeled a castle in Turkey on the ocean plus 400 acres. I can live in the Muslim world."

Ali, who has earned over $55 million in his boxing career, lives lavishly and travels around with an entourage of about 50 persons who all stay at the finest hotels and live like kings and queens. He indicated that he's planning to go into the fast-food business with Joy Y. Brown, the entrepreneur behind the growth of Colonel Sanders.

"We built two of them. If those two make money, we'll build another. And my TV cartoon series starts in September. The Adventures of Muhammad Ali did the voice for over 10 shows. They come on every week for about four or five years. That's steady money. They give me about thirty, forty thousand a year."

Ali pointed out that he had previously invested lots of money in every imaginable type of enterprise. "I've been in everything," he stated, "Oil, real estate, import-export, all these deal; people just want your money to do the deal.

"I fell in with people who didn't know what they were doing and they were looking out for their own pockets. There are no good deals. Real Estate? You've got to hire managers; you've got to hire people to watch the real estate.

"Best thing is tax-free municipal bonds. Put them up, and don't touch them. If a man can get himself, oh, $5 million clear, why do you want to make money? You've got money. Some of the tax-free bonds are making what 6 percent? What's that a year? $300,000? If a man can't live on $300,000 tax-free dollars a year, he can't live on anything."

"Just give me my check every month (when he is through boxing) and I don't want no headaches, no phone calls."

No type of coastal area contains more wildlife than a marsh. Marine biologists estimate that one acre of marsh mud may contain as many as 82,000 individuals of a single species of worm, along with billions of bacteria. What they consume fertilizes the mud and gives the marsh its great vitality.

Foreman Gets 2 Year Contract Extension

BLOOMINGTON, MINN. — Star running back Chuck Foreman agreed Tuesday night to a two year extension of his contract with the Minnesota Vikings, the National Football League has announced.

The contract extension ended a salary dispute between Foreman and the Vikings that dated back to last January's Super Bowl. At that time Foreman told reporters he did not expect to play for Minnesota again. Later, he said that contractual differences had gone beyond money and "under no circumstances" would he play for the Vikings.
