TIPS FROM THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

GREENSBORO - Taxpayers filing 1978 Federal tax returns and making alimony or separate maintenance payments to spouses or former spouses may claim such payments as a credit, the Internal Revenue Service says.

Alimony is subtracted from gross income in arriving at adjusted gross income and is entered on line 27 of the Form 1040.

However, the IRS says, CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS ARE NOT CLASSIFIED AS DEDUCTIBLE EXPENSES FOR TAX PURPOSES.

Alimony or separate maintenance payments claimed on the income tax return must be the result of a court decree and made periodically.

Spouses or former spouses receiving alimony or separate maintenance payments must report such payments as income on their tax return.

Detailed information on the tax treatment of alimony and separate maintenance payments is available in Publication 504, "Tax Information for Divorced or Separated Individuals," or any taxpayer may call the IRS toll-free at 800-822-8800 for information. (Occasionally, the phone line is monitored to ensure courteous and accurate information.)
