Buyer-Supplier Conference Slated For Charlotte

The Business Assistance Division of the state's Department of Commerce will sponsor a conference for all North Carolina manufacturers interested in developing new sources or markets for products and services. This conference, scheduled for April 15th at the Holiday Inn-Airport in Charlotte, will bring together purchasing representatives from major in-state manufacturers and local suppliers of goods and services.

Buyers will hope to discover new North Carolina sources for needed goods and services, while in-state suppliers will seek to develop new markets for their products. The 1978 conference in Winston-Salem attracted over 400 participating firms; many more are expected this year.

Interested area manufacturers are encouraged to attend this program and there will be no charges for participation in the conference. For more information contact Jim Camp, Director of Economic Development for the Durham Chamber of Commerce at 682-2133.

Why are so many people using Wachovia Teller II when the bank is open?

The answer is, convenience. To some, it's the convenience of not having to write a check. To others, it's just the convenience of not having to go inside the bank lobby.

Teller II is truly the banking machine for people who don't like machines. It can handle just about any banking service you may need. Quickly, easily and conveniently.

So, when you have banking to do after hours, or on weekends or holidays, by all means use Teller II. But don't forget that you can use it during banking hours as well. Give it a try, this week.

When you bank at Wachovia, you can always use Teller II.

Transportation

Travel by bus, it was explained, is the "only affordable means of transportation (in most cases) for the poor who find it impossible to travel by air or AMTRAK due to the inflated cost".....

The resolution noted that "airlines and AMTRAK receive government subsidies in the form of revenues to build and maintain airports and train terminals, even though only 240 million persons travel by air and AMTRAK as opposed to 340 million persons traveling by bus." The latter, however, receive no federal subsidy and must build and maintain terminals out of declining operating revenue. "With the decline in intercity bus traffic volume and sharply rising inflationary costs, bus companies can no longer afford to build modern terminal facilities of the same quality as airports and AMTRAK's new facilities," the resolution contended.

The resolution concluded: "WHEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the National Conference of Black Mayors, Inc., encourages Administration and Congressional representatives and major organizations interested in community revitalization, urban renewal, construction and transportation to seriously examine the concept and take concrete steps to initiate Transportation Centers in major cities, thus contributing to inter-city revitalization and American mobility."

The NCBM, which maintains its headquarters in Atlanta, under the direction of Executive Director Michelle D. Kourouma, is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, service-oriented organization, formed to assist black mayors in defining their problems and identifying sources of funds that could be utilized in improving the social and economic conditions of their constituents.
