and expulsion from school discriminatory treatment of black teachers, racially slanted teaching materials, and the provision of state tuition grants to all-white "desegregation academies."

LDF continues to assist lawyers defending nearly 500 men and three women under death sentence in 25 states. As a result of its victories, based on research that proved the unjust disproportion of death sentences meted out to black defendants, all executions except one (a suicide) have been prevented since 1967.

In the course of these capital punishment cases, LDF has repeatedly proven the systematic exclusion of blacks from jury lists, and the exclusion from juries of citizens who disapprove of the death penalty. As a result of Supreme Court decisions in cases brought by the fund, 35 states have passed new Prisoners' rights receive vital Legal Defense Fund work. The Legal Defense Fund has long been the only private ressource in the United States engaged in comprehensive legal action to remedy conditions in local jails where degradation and brutality are commonplace. After a succession of monplace. After a succession of court victories, the Fund's task now is to make sure that court-ordered that the guerrillas and their leaders have often stated that they are to establish a socialist society, a society that is stiffly opposed by the Bishop and his government allies. It is incredible to think that the guerrillas could lay down their arms and support a capitalist government which they have been fighting against for the past thir-teen years. To think that would be to underestimate the teen years. To think that would be to underestimate the political education that goes on in camps.

Muzorewa had to reconcile his stated intention to maintain links with South Africa with the desired expection of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), The Front Line States and The Liberation Movements to create a situation favorable enough for the liberation onslaught on racist South Africa. The OAU, the Front Line States (Mozambique Rotewana Zambia Tan Line States (Mozambique, Botswana, Zambia, Tanzania and Angola) and the South African Liberation Movements are looking forward to Zimbabwe being the strongest springboard when the onslaught on South Africa begins. The Zimbabwe liberation movements and their backers see themselves as having an interna-tional duty toward their comrades in South Africa to help them liberate themselves. Under Muzorewa, this duty will not be fullfilled since he has promised to maintain links with his trading partner South Africa and since, Rhodesian whites will be controlling the army.

From this analysis, one can deduce that it is not the color of the man who heads the government in Rhodesia that will stop the war. Rather it is the man who can do and achieve what the guerrillas have been fighting for who can end the war. This may seem rather pessimistic to internatinal property owners who have massive investments in the Southern part of the continent, but they must come to recognize that Muzorewa's govern-ment is not the best alternative to them. The only answer is to solve the root cause of the problem.

would rewrite the nation's criminal code, tightening down on the right to assemble, bail, and many other aspects of criminal justice. Several speakers, including Ossie Davis, predicted that the Alliance conference would be an illegal meeting under provisions of that law.

The conference had its touching moments. New York Judge Bruce Wright broke into tears as he was introduced and brought to the podium. Under attack by New York police and Mayor Koch for allowing low bail for defendants accused of crimes, thousands at the Covenant Baptist Church chanted "Bruce is right".
