quent payments which were paid on time. A "class action" law suit, explained Attorney Sosna, is a procedure which seeks relief or damages for others persons whose circumstances are similar to the Plaintiff's cause of action. "In this suit we are alleging that First Union National Bank received charges to which it was not entitled from members of the 'class' or group, by assessing default fees during months in which payments were in fact made on time, as was done to Mr. Steed," Sosna said. "The class action seeks to recover damages and excess fees for Steed and anyone else who was assessed default charges by the Bank in a similar manner."
