LENTEN BOOKLET TO FEATURE WORKS OF FIFTY PERSONS

PRINCETON, NJ — Some fifty persons have written meditations for a 1981 Lenten booklet on "Liberation and Unity" sponsored by the ten-denomination Consultation on Church Union (COCU) and black church groups.

It is the sixth consecutive year for the book of meditations focusing on obedience, commitment, grace, suffering-unity, justice, love and power themes within the black religious experience. The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Publishing House, Charlotte, NC, is the publisher.

Dr. John E. Brandon, associate general secretary of COCU, explained that "The daily meditations are written to convey to the laity the distinctive emphases of contemporary theological reflection in the black Christian community." He said the meditations serve as inspiration for individuals and family meditation and as a resource for Christian education for all Christians.

In addition to COCU and the AME Zion Church, those cooperating in the project are the African Methodist Episcopal Church, Christian Methodist Episcopal Church and the National Conference of Black Churchmen (NCBC).

The Lenten booklet was first proposed in 1975 by the NCBC and details were worked out at a COCU-sponsored communications workshop. The booklet first appeared for Lent in 1976. Subsequent booklets have been published each year. The editorial board is made up of leaders of the sponsoring groups, with the COCU associate general secretary as general editor.

Quantities can be ordered from COCU at 228 Alexander Street, Princeton, NJ 08540, for 50¢ per copy or 40¢ for orders over 100, plus postage and handling.

A dash of vinegar left standing in a room will dispel the odor of smoke. To get the smoke out of a room quickly, soak a towel in water, wring it out then swish it around the room.

Weatherstrip Doors, Windows to Cut Cost

Reducing the heat loss around windows and doors can be one of the most effective means of fuel savings during the winter home heating period. Check your home to see where weatherstripping is needed.

If your windows and doors aren't weatherstripped or if the original needs replacing, you will have several materials to choose from when you go shopping.

North Carolina State University agricultural extension housing specialists list the materials as foam rubber weatherstripping with an adhesive backing, rolled vinyl and thin spring metal.

The foam rubber with adhesive backing is easy to install and should be used in pressfit situations. However, foam rubber breaks down and wears rather quickly.

Roller vinyl is installed using tacks or staples. It is visible when installed and comes with or without metal backing. Rolled vinyl is considered easy to install and is very durable.

This spring metal weatherstripping is installed in the channel of the window frame, so it is virtually invisible. It is somewhat difficult to install, but it is considered quite durable.

You'll also have several methods and materials to choose from when weatherstripping doors. Around the top and sides you may use adhesive backed foam; rolled vinyl with aluminum channel backing; foam rubber with wood backing; spring metal interlocking metal channels; and fitted interlocking metal channels, which are often referred to as J-strips.

To seal the threshold, you may use one of four devices or methods — sweeps, door shoes, vinyl bulb threshold, or interlocking thresholds.

Family Records Clue To Family Finances

Keeping family records can be a chore, but a necessary and profitable one.

"A family is involved in the business of living," observes Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist, North Carolina State University, "so its financial success depends on keeping the right records and using them when needed."

Dr. Hinson offers these suggestions:

1. Organize and store family records for safe keeping and use.
2. Store records that are hard or expensive to replace or that prove ownership of valuables in a fireproof and theftproof storage spot.
3. For records kept at home, use a deep desk, file or cabinet drawer or a deep box. Store your records according to types.
4. Designate a specific place to put all family papers and receipts until they can be recorded or filed.
5. Identify one family member to be responsible for recording and storing a records and schedule a definite and regular time for recording. This may be once a week, twice a month, or whatever works for you.

6. Make an inventory of the family's important papers and where they are stored.

7. Retain records as long as needed. For example, keep permanently: personal records pertaining to adoption, divorce, education, employment, funeral or burial, health and medical care, marriage birth, patents, social security number and military records.

Keep insurance records as long as they are in effect. Financial authorities suggest keeping income tax papers for 10 years. Most IRS audits are made within three years but they can go back as far as necessary.

Dust and dirt should be removed from African violet leaves with a camel's hair brush. Leaves shouldn't be sprayed with water. Water causes white spots.
