

First Recipients of Feng Scholarship at FSU Announced

FAYETTEVILLE — Billy C. Hopkins, Jr., and Ms. Christine Davidson have been declared the first two recipients of the Feng Scholarship at Fayetteville State University.

The Feng Scholarship was given to the University by Chih-An Feng, president of the Fu-shin Institute of Technology, in the Republic of China, during a visit to Fayetteville State University's campus in January of this year.

Hopkins is a senior Early Childhood Education major from Charlotte. During the course of his college career, he has been the recipient of numerous scholarships and awards. He was the first recipient of the J.S. Jones Memorial Scholarship.

While at FSU, Hopkins has been active in all facets of university life.

He is present senior class president, immediate past president of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, coordinator of the Peer Counselor Program, president of Kappa Delta Pi, an honor society in education; news editor for the Voice, FSU's student newspaper, and is a member of Alpha Kappa Mu National Honor Society. Hopkins' GPA is 3.80.

The fourth of eight children, Hopkins is the first member of his family to complete both high school and college. When asked what has motivated him to excel, Hopkins replies, "I try to maintain a belief in what I call the three C's — Confidence, Control and Consistency — in all endeavors."

After graduation in May, 1981, Hopkins will attend Ohio State Univering carefully at the 'Enterprise Zone' proposals from this perspective. That policy would especially encourage creation of the small businesses that generate most new private-sector jobs.

"We believe that major roles should be played by neighborhood and community-based groups capable of helping to create jobs, products and service — and of brokering private and public resources from outside the target communities."

Among other things urged by the Black Leadership Forum were full employment and the implementation of the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill; extension of affirmative action programs to all areas where federal spending is involved, including set-asides; appointment of blacks to policy-making and judicial positions in the Cabinet and administrative agencies, as well as to the U.S. Supreme Court; extension of the Voter Rights Act; maintenance and extension of the minimum wage; support of majority rule and end of apartheid in South Africa; economic and moral support of Third World nations; federal funds to be targeted on the basis of economic need; public works aimed at relieving poverty; national health insurance; the federal government as the final guarantor of civil rights and the rebuilding of cities to improve health, housing, transportation and social improvement.

The Forum also urged support for maintenance of CETA and the funding of community-based organizations as well as quality integrated education for every American; aid to black higher education and support to the Justice Department's implementation of all laws and regulations.

A special request was made by the Black Leadership Forum for a continuing dialogue with the Executive Branch to maintain an ongoing input toward decisions being made that affect blacks and poor.

Anti-Busing Rider

The meeting with the President-elect capped a two-week long stint of ongoing lobbying and staff work as well as a meeting with President and Mrs. Carter on December 4. At that meeting, Hooks joined Urban League head, Vernon Jordan, and Rev. Jesse Jackson in ironing out strategy for President Carter in dealing with the anti-busing rider attached to the Justice Department's appropriations bill.

The rider posed severe political problems for President Carter in that if the out-going President vetoed the appropriations bill a similar rider might be attached later to a continuing appropriations bill of far larger scope, where a veto would effectively stop Federal government activity altogether.

"The strategy decided upon was to threaten a veto if the anti-busing amendment was not withdrawn," explained Hooks. The political ploy proved effective and the rider was vetoed separately from the bill and was not overridden, although Senator Jesse Helms claimed that he had sufficient votes to override the veto.

Monday, December 1, Hooks granted an interview with Dean Breils of Time Magazine on the expected impact of a Republican-controlled Congress.

Strategies

Besides lobbying for fair housing and against anti-busing riders, Hooks and the NAACP staff spent many hours in conference developing strategies aimed at enhancing NAACP accomplishments during the 1980s, gearing up for the advent of a new Republican Administration and Congress.

While hopping back and forth between New York City and Washington, Hooks also met with the fifty-member Commission For An Agenda For The 80s
