BLACK GIANTS

HUGH N. MULZAC

In 1918, Hugh N. Mulzac earned his master's ticket in the merchant marine, but it was 24 years before he was given a chance to use it. Discrimination blocked him from command.

Though qualified as a captain, Mulzac had to content himself in such berths as able-bodied seaman, steward and cook.

He finally broke the color barrier shortly after the outbreak of World War II, however, when he was given command of a new liberty ship, the Booker T. Washington.

In 1969, the New York chapter of the Assn. for the Study of Negro Life and History, taking note of Mulzac's role as America's first black merchant captain honored him "for bringing honor and hope to black seamen."

Mulzac died in Long Island two years later at about the age of 82.
