

Social Workers
committee.
Strong opposition to the bill also came from the N.C. County Commissioners Association because of the cost of continuing education to state agencies for social workers, who would have to return to one of the nine accrediting schools which would require that the social worker take both time and money from the employer. Eventually, eight predominantly white organizations and 160 black organizations from across the state sent letters or representatives to oppose the bill.

Dunston said, "I wish to express sincere appreciation to the state-wide black organizations who wrote letters to the Governor, Lt. Governor, the Speaker of the House and the various House Committee members who reviewed the bill."

He also said that Representative Tom Ellis of Henderson is to be commended for "allowing proponents as well as opponents the only truly meaningful opportunity to have their respective views heard by the full House Finance Committee."

Currently, there are 1,005 social workers on the State Merit Register; only 22 are black and there are no blacks listed in 76 of North Carolina's 100 counties.
