

Local Women Attend National Congress

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom held its Biennial Congress in Ypsilanti, Michigan, June 17-21. Attending from Durham were Ms. Sadie Hughley, president of the Durham-Chapel Hill Branch of WILPF and Ms. Linda McGloin, program chair for the Congress, and past national board member, from Chapel Hill were Dr. Anneliese Markus-Kennedy, national board member, and Ms. Siphra Rolland, past of the local branch.

Titled "Women Unite for Peace and Freedom", the conference featured workshops on racism, prisons, the Middle East, Central America, U.S. involvement in southeast Asia, women and militarism, and the nuclear freeze.

The conference was addressed at its opening session on Wednesday by Ann Fagan Ginger, noted civil liberties lawyer, author, political activist. In discussing "Safeguarding Our Human Rights", she enumerated five broad categories that include each person's basic rights: civil rights, rights to due process, equal rights, right to security, and the right to peace. She identified the Moral Majority, Ku Klux Klan, Nazis and transnational corporations as groups who are violating our basic human rights and are acting out of and playing on other's fears.

One panel featured exiled Philippine lawyer and human rights activist, Ms. Charito Planas, and Ms. Fagan Ginger in a discussion of the right of self-determination, non-violence and a Third World perspective. Speaking for poor countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, Ms. Planas said, "Peace comes by achievement of justice, and justice can be brought about only by eliminating poverty, oppression and exploitation." The American attorney supported Ms. Planas' contention that "people in power will not relinquish it easily." She added that those who have not experienced hunger must be cautious in judging the violence of others who have suffered.

Other speakers included Ms. Kay Camp, past International President of WILPF and one of six people who recently visited Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica; and Dr. Gerald Drake, member of Physicians for Social Responsibility and active in the anti-nuclear movement. A students' Institute sponsored a roundtable on "Minority Voices in WILPF" where Afro-Americans, men, working women and other minorities presented their concerns along with the younger members.

WILPF priorities for the year were described by International President Carol Pendell when she launched a pilot program, "The Star Campaign" — an effort to register one million women for peace. She explained the focus of the campaign as the international mobilization of women to demand positive action toward disarmament from the nations of the world to be presented to the 1982 United Nations Special Session on Disarmament, next spring.

Additional priorities adopted include working to abolish racism and sexism on an institutional and personal level. Consideration of resolutions ranged from condemnation of the Atlanta murders, the human life amendments and the MX missile, to support for various international refugees.

The conference concluded with a banquet featuring Judge George W. Crockett, Jr., a congressman and labor and civil liberties lawyer. Speaking on "Blacks and Foreign Policy," he analyzed the current Washington scene.

WILPF is an international organization with over 100 U.S. branches and 10,000 members, and sections in 25 countries around the world. Founded in 1915 with Jane Addams as its first president, WILPF works through non-violent means to eliminate the causes of oppression and to end the arms race. WILPF works through education, non-partisan political action, lobbying, and public forum.
