Chancellor Recognized By Association

Chancellor Albert N. Whiting of North Carolina Central University was honored recently by the International Association of University Presidents at the association's triennial convention in Costa Rica.

Dr. Whiting received the association's Medal of Merit for contributions to the association and to the cause of world peace.

The NCCU Chancellor was re-elected treasurer of the association. He also serves on its executive board. Whiting has held a vice-presidency of the association.

Whiting was one of five North Carolina educators among the 700 college and university heads attending the conference, held from June 25 through July 3. The other North Carolinians were President James Scales of Wake Forest University, Chancellor E.K. Fretwell of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Chancellor Charles Lyons of Fayetteville State University, and President Prezell Robinson of St. Augustine's College, Raleigh.

Costa Rica has donated a site for a University of Peace, to be operated by the United Nations or another international agency. The Central American nation is the only nation in the Western Hemisphere without a standing army, and takes pride in a long history of democracy and pacifism. The University of Peace was the subject of extended discussions among the presidents of universities from sixty nations. Chancellor Whiting said the speakers and association members found general agreement among themselves as to the desirability of an educational institution dedicated to peace.

"About the only agreement on the curriculum is that it must be interdisciplinary," Chancellor Whiting reported. "There was also agreement that the university initially should be for graduate students only."

The Chancellor said funding for the University of Peace is in sight. "Costa Rica will provide the site. Major gifts are expected to provide some funding, although that has not been voted, and both Mexico and Venezuela have pledged a portion of their oil revenues for the University."

Other topics treated by the university presidents included Latin-America Education and the Education in the Third World.

The association installed as its new president President Leland Miles of the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut. He succeeds Dr. Young Seok Choue of Korea in the post.
