NBIPP Meet

The Kent State meetings constitute the fourth and last in a series of four meetings which have convened in Ann Arbor, Michigan (January, 1981), Memphis, Tennessee (April, 1981), and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania (June, 1981). Kent State University will be the last stop on the road to Chicago, Illinois, which is the chosen site for NBIPP's First National Party Congress.

Delegates and observers from across the nation are expected to descend on Wendell Phillips High School and Tabernacle Baptist Church; both are located on Chicago's southside, where the National Black Independent Political Party's First National Party Congress will convene August 21-23. Ratification of the charter and the election of officers will be two of the agenda items.

The National Party Congress will culminate 151 years of discussions and debates on the question of forming a Black Political Party. The seeds of a black Political Party were planted by Richard Allen at the 1830 Philadelphia Convention.

"In these desperate times, it is crucial that we begin looking inward to ourselves to take care of matters that others are not willing or are unable to take care of, such as reducing high unemployment, insufficient housing, and economic deprivation," said a spokesman for the Party.
