

Special Helps Viewers Perfect The Art Of Jobseeking

Changing jobs ranks as one of the most stressful challenges a person undertakes in a career. With the average executive changing jobs once every four years, job hunting is a process that one can hardly avoid.

Successful job hunting isn't a matter of luck, it is a learned skill with a definite series of steps. Those steps to new employment are illustrated in Changing Jobs:

Crisis or Opportunity?, a one-hour special airing on Center Channel 4, Wednesday, August 12 at 9 p.m. The program is a production of the UNC Center for Public Television in association with the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

Changing Jobs takes a marketing approach to job hunting. The job seeker is the "product" who is researched, packaged and promoted in the job market.

The program divides the hunt into three phases: 1) skill evaluation — the job seeker defines his or her interest, skills, and experience to help focus the search; 2) resume and letter writing and job hunting; and 3) the job interview.

The program visits several state, federal and private agencies where a job seeker can go to get counseling and skills evaluation. Also, personnel professionals discuss the various places a person can look to find a job, including several state and federal agencies that keep lists of available jobs. The state Employment Security Commission, for example, lists over 9,000 available jobs. Other employment outlets presented include classified ads, private employment agencies and the Yellow Pages.

The job interview is where most job seekers have the most problems. The key to a successful interview is being prepared. Changing Jobs gives tips on how to prepare for the interview and how to handle discussions on salary, benefits, vacations and other negotiable aspects of the job.

Changing Jobs: Crisis or Opportunity is narrated by Reese Edwards. The program was produced by Jim Bramlett and directed by Karl Coleman. The program is repeated on Saturday, August 15 at 7 p.m.

Partial funding for Changing Jobs: Crisis or Opportunity was provided by a CETA Title VII grant through the Balance of State Private Industry Council, Employment Generating Fund.
