

Donald Byrd Headlines Minority Arts Festival

PITTSBURGH, PA — Donald Byrd and the 125th Street Band, Rufus Harley, noted black bagpipe artists, and a host of internationally and nationally acclaimed dramatists, dancers and musicians will perform at Expressions in Excellence: A Festival of Black, Hispanic and Native American Arts, to be held Friday, August 21 to Sunday, August 23 here. Fine artists and crafts people will also participate in the Festival with an invitational exhibition, a juried show and an outdoor open show.

To date, seven dance companies will perform during the three day event. They include the internationally known Arthur Hall and his Afro-American Dance Ensemble; Philadanco from the City of Brotherly Love; the Pittsburgh Black Theatre Dance Ensemble; Armonia Folklorica, a Hispanic group; New Jersey's Inner City Ensemble Theater and Dance Company; and two Native American groups: Delaware's Nanticoke Fancy Men's Dancers and the Thunderbird Dancers from New York.

Drama companies include Philadelphia's New Freedom Theatre, which is ranked among the top six black theatre groups in the nation; the Kuntu Repertory Theatre from the University of Pittsburgh Department of Black Studies; Karamu Theatre Company from Ohio; the New Theatre of Washington; the National Black Theatre of New York; La Familia, a Hispanic group, also from New York; and New Jersey's Crossroads Theatre.

The music will range from intimate performances by solosists to soulful gospel sounds and from opera to the brassy big band beat. Philadelphia's professional black opera company, Opera ebony; Pittsburgh's favorite trumpeter Harold Betters; the New Jersey Philharmonic Glee Club; Creative Artists Music Ensemble, a big band group; Natalie Hinderas, concert pianist, and the Reverend Tommy Brown and the Gospel Now Singers are among the many musicians who will perform at "Expressions of Excellence."

The fine arts and crafts exhibits will include photography, paintings, prints, sculpture, weaving, jewelry and wood carvings. Invited artists include Hembert Howard, Reba Dickerson-Hill, Native American Peter Jemison, sculptor Oliver LaGrone; and photographer Adal Maldonado.

Seminars on arts management and marketing will be conducted by experts during the Festival.

Dr. Nathan Davis, associate professor of music at the University of Pittsburgh and a saxophonist who has performed all over the world, is on-site coordinator of Expressions in Excellence: A Festival of Black, Hispanic and Native American Arts.

New Exterior Wood Finish . . .

Seals, Waterproofs, And Beautifies Log Homes With One Application

A high solids protective finish that's especially effective in keeping exterior log home woods "alive" has recently been introduced. The new finish not only seals and waterproofs the logs, but actually enhances or restores their natural beauty.

The product, manufactured by The Flood Company, is being marketed as CWF Clear Wood Finish, and unlike other exterior finishes, it will penetrate the logs to provide a rugged, durable seal against the elements. Applied properly, it retards swelling, shrinking, warping, and splitting. Because it penetrates, it will not crack, chip or peel like varnish, nor will it hide the natural beauty of the logs as stains do.

The product can be used on smooth peeled or rough cut logs, as well as on cedar shakes and redwood decks. It works equally well on old, new, rough sawn, planed or pressure treated wood. With exposure to sunlight, it will produce a uniform honey to brown color which enhances new wood and restores the natural beauty of weathered wood.

New logs should be allowed to weather 6 months to 1 year. The CWF can then be applied in two wet-on-wet coats by brush, roller, airless or garden sprayer.

The product will leave a rich matte finish. This color will lighten within the first few months depending on sun intensity. Even though the wood eventually may appear very light, it looks natural and is still protected. When a light gray develops, it is time to recoat to renew protection and color. This long weathering cycle will then start again.
