Reagan's Mandate

 Reagan formula for economic recovery. The tide of public opinion has indeed begun to shift. Not so much against Reagan, the man, who remains an affable and popular figure, but against the policies which are emerging from his administration. As Ronald Reagan plans his future policies, he does so with the knowledge that his base of support and his mandate for change are rapidly evaporating.

WASHINGTON, D.C. [NNPA] — Arnette R. Hubbard, president of the National Bar Association, the nation's oldest black bar association, has sharply criticized the Reagan Administration's recent announcement that the Department of Justice will no longer go into court to win class action suits in job bias cases. Breaking with past policies, Reagan says that the Justice Department will abandon class action suits and instead will seek "remedies such as back pay, retroactive seniority, reinstatement, hiring and promotional priorities." The Reagan Administration also announced that it will "no longer... insist upon nor in any respect support the use of numerical formulas designed to provide non-victims of discrimination preferential treatment based upon race, sex, national origin or religion." Hubbard contends that abandoning class action suits in combatting job bias "is tantamount to a total abdication of the Justice Department's role in enforcing rules against job bias." On a case-by-case basis, as the Administration says it will do, "is in effect saying that the Justice Department is giving employers the green light for discrimination against blacks and other minorities." "At best," stressed Hubbard, "the Justice Department could only litigate a handful of suits on a case-by-case approach, whereas through class action suits, hundreds of thousands of cases could be resolved." Noting that "it should now be clear to all Americans that Reagan is determined to eradicate most aspects of affirmative action from this society," Hubbard contends

Close families should never let a few hundred miles keep them apart.

Whether your family is scattered across a county or across the country, you can still get together often. And inexpensively. Just go Greyhound. We can take you and your family to just about any city or town in America. And we can take you there in style. In safety. And in comfort. So next time you want to get the whole family together, leave your car at home. Leave your worries at home. And leave the driving to us.

Algeria
 Beginning this year, foreign trade, too, has received new emphasis, particularly in the area of cooperation with other African states. Algerian leaders are hopeful they can boost trade within the continent. And, referring to the concept of a new international economic order, officials say they would like to see Algeria play a role in the provision of sorely-needed technical expertise to other Third World nations.
