move to de-emphasize football at Duke and the school quickly fell behind its conference rivals in the number of wins per season.

Red Wilson has been at Duke only three seasons, so naturally it would take him a while to reshape a program that had been down for so long.

While many were laughing, Wilson was molding new confidence on the West Durham campus. His players believe in him and now he has an athletic administration that's seeking to turn to Devils back into winners. The football stadium has been renovated and for the first time in recent memory, Duke fans are truly proud of their team. Whether Red beats Carolina or not, he deserves to have the right to continue to lead Duke into the sunshine of success. Kiffin-N.C. State:

Kiffin's pressures have been different from those of Latimore and Wilson. The Nebraska native inherited a program that has been used to winning since Lou Holtz and later Bo Rein were leading the Wolfpack to bowl games for most of the 1970's.

The likeable Kiffin produced a surprising 6-5 winner at State in 1980 and since that team was young, hopes were high among the State faithful that things would be even better in 1981.

For a while, it looked like their feelings would hold up as State got off to a 4-1 start. But then an almost unbelievable number of close, heart-breaking defeats were inflicted on State by North Carolina, Clemson, South Carolina, Penn. State and Duke. It's enough to make a grown man cry. For Kiffin who had been used to winning both as a player and coach at Nebraska and Arkansas, the losses were bitter pills to swallow.

Naturally there has been some grumbling in Raleigh, but Kiffin should have his chance to prove that he, like his predecessors, is a true winner.

Dick Crum-UNC:

You may think that Crum has it easiest of all. After all, he will be taking Carolina to its third straight bowl. He's got the 'Heels known as a top ten team. He has helped UNC become nationally recognized for its football as well as basketball. For a while this season, his faithful were legitimately thinking of a national championship, a goal that could be reached next season.

Surely things are jumping in Chapel Hill now. But Crum's first season (1978) was plagued by player dissension, disappointing defeats and losing (5-6) season

There were cries among the UNC loyalists for Crum's scalp, but he survived the firestorm. Sure, sports writers shouldn't be PR people for coaches, but neither should they kick people when they are down.

Allen has the edge, but it's still too early to say who will definitely open at the center position. Hillside's starting lineup has not been determined.

The Hornets will play a 20-game regular season schedule, plus participate in the Holiday Tournament, Dec. 28, 29, 30. All varsity basketball games are scheduled to start at 8 p.m.
