

MILLER PAYS TRIBUTE TO BLACKS

"Baretta," and "Starsky and Hutch."

—Katherine Dunham, who revolutionized American dance more than forty years ago with her introduction of Afro-Caribbean dance forms.

Romare Bearden, one of the country's foremost living artists who work reflects the improvisational techniques of the jazz musician.

Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee, a husband-wife acting/writing team which, in the words of the New York Urban League's Frederick Douglass Award, has brought a "sense of fervor and pride to countless millions" during more than thirty years of partnership.

—Leontyne Price, whose rich soprano voice drew a 42-minute ovation for her performance in Il Trovatore in 1961, and has continued to bring her honors and recognition throughout the world.

—Douglas Turner Ward, co-founder and director of the Negro Ensemble Company, which for more than fourteen years, has brought the black experience to the stage — winning two Tony Awards and more than a dozen Obie Awards.

—Gerald Duane Coleman, whose poignant black clowns, wistful blue gorillas and meticulously accurate reproductions of African-American Voo Doo mythology, are found in public buildings and private collections.

—Dancer/Choreographer Arthur Mitchell, whose ballet troupe, the Dance Theater of Harlem, and ballet school of the same name have introduced ballet to thousands of Harlem children and Harlem dance talent to thousands of ballet audiences all over the world.

—Frederick Eversley, an engineer turned sculptor whose work has become internationally known for combining aesthetic and scientific principles.

—The late painter Charles White, who was noted for works on famous American blacks and on the suffering of the lowly and anonymous.
