Marion Gooding Makes Nursing Programs Successful

By Donald Alderman

For most of Dr. Marion F. Gooding's professional career, she has labored to make struggling college nursing programs successful. She offers consultation services, development of long-term plans for program implementation and conducts faculty workshops. Her work usually leads to higher performance by nursing program gradduates on state licensure exams.

Because she produces results, Dr. Gooding is the Distinguished Scholar at North Carolina Central University for the 1981-82 second semester.

Chancelor Albert N. Whiting gave the Distinguished Scholar position to the Nursing Department to help strengthen the program.

In the one semester she will be here, Dr. Gooding is expected to spark more life into a program that some say is struggling for survival. Dr. Johnea Kelley, the program's director, said the program's students are fortunate to have Dr. Gooding to learn from.

Since 1977, the nursing program operated under a mandate from the UNC Board of Governors to improve its students' performances on the state licensure exam, or be axed. The program has now survived that threat, according to officials, but Dr. Gooding hopes to help steer it to new horizons.

NCCU's nursing program was reaccredited in 1981 by the National League for Nursing and approved by the N.C. Board of Nursing.

Dr. Gooding has developed a plan of supportive activities that includes involving faculty and students in the legislative process and making the nursing program more viable and visible in the Durham community and throughout the state.

"Our objectives are based on the department's needs and set within reasonable time frames," Dr. Gooding commented. "Our goal is to improve every aspect that leads to effective student outcome."

Administration officials have approved an eightpoint plan developed by Dr. Gooding which includes the following objectives:

 Improving learning and teaching strategies. · Conducting workshops to improve and enhance faculty skills. Increase the visibility of the NCCU Nursing

Dr. Gooding completely revised the nursing department at Essex County College of Newark, New Jersey in 1972 which, within two years, led to a reversal of graduates' performance on the licensure exam from 35 per cent to 98 per cent.

She pioneered the first college nursing program at the College of the Virgin Islands, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, which was fully accredited in two

Dr. Gooding was also responsible for developing programs in Nursing, Physical Therapy, Medical Lab Technician and Respiratory Therapist at Brookdale Community College of Lincroft, New Jersey in 1975.
