

Howard Track Coach To Prepare Future Olympians

By Donnie R. Tuck
Howard University track coach William P. Moultrie has been a long-time advocate of the no-nonsense approach to track: "We don't make excuses, we just line up and go."

Moultrie

It is a philosophy that has produced 28 All-Americans at Howard and resulted in some record-setting times. It has also brought Moultrie a rapid introduction and ascendancy into the realm of national and international track competition.

This summer, Moultrie will attempt to use his proven methodology to motivate some of this country's top track and field talents as head coach of the East team of the U.S. Olympic Committee's National Sports Festival.

Last year, Moultrie was selected as the U.S. Olympic Committee's national co-chairman for the 200 meters and regional chairman for the event. He was also named assistant coach for the National Sports Festival's East team.

As sprint chairman for the East region of the United States, Moultrie went to the World Cup Games in Rome last fall to do research in a new technique that he has developed — "The Concept of Pacing in the 200 Meters."

"The concept of pacing in the 200 meters grew out of a question I had in my mind that if a person wanted to run a 20.5, where should he be at given intervals?"

Moultrie explains, "Working with Dr. Johnny Richardson of the Howard Physics Department, we were able to answer the question from a scientific standpoint."

The scientific-minded coach presented the findings of his research to the National Athletic Congress, the national governing body of track and field in this country, and the Olympic Committee last December in Reno, Nevada.

Moultrie became

Howard's head track coach as well as assistant football coach in 1973. In his second year at the helm of the Bison's track program, the school's first All-America mile relay team was produced.

Despite not having an indoor track facility for practice, the Bison mile relay team finished second in the nation in the 1977 NCAA indoor championships, and ran a school-record, 3:05.0, while placing fourth in the NCAA outdoor meet.

The Olympic Committee took notice of Moultrie's mile relay's consistent performances and, in 1978, named him assistant director for the National Sports Festival.

In 1979, Moultrie was appointed to the National Sprint Staff for the Olympic Committee. Before coming to the Howard, Moultrie was an assistant football coach at Stanford University for five years. It was also during his tenure at Stanford that the football team won back-to-back Rose Bowl championships in 1971 and 1972, the last school to do so.

Although his career has advanced to Olympic coaching, he still worked hard at fine-tuning Howard's track team. The university's All-American mile relay team recently registered the fastest indoor time in the country this year to win that event at the U.S. Olympic Invitational Meet at the Meadows in East Rutherford, N.J. It also established a new meet record in winning that event at the Princeton Relays earlier this month.

In assessing his coaching career, the former football and track standout at Texas Southern University says his aspirations are not to be a full-time Olympic coach, but to continue to work with athletes who are in the Howard program.

"Often times, we set our goals on being an Olympics coach, and we neglect the walk-on athlete who might never make it to the Penn Relays of the the NCAA's," Moultrie reasons. "But this shouldn't mean that he can't receive the same knowledge, technique, and training methods that the Olympians receive."
