Ralph Sampson Is Tanqueray Winner

NEW YORK — Ralph Sampson, the Virginia gianter who has accomplished more in three years of college basketball competition than any previous player has done in four, has been selected as the winner of the 1982 Tanqueray Achievement Award for excellence in amateur sports.

The 7-foot, 4-inch tower of power kept the Cavaliers in the forefront throughout the 1981-82 season as they consistently were at the top in the national basketball rankings. At the finish he was a unanimous selection for every all-America team, and went on to selection as the player of the year. Sampson, who weighs only 219 pounds despite his "awesome height, gained every honor in sight this season as was the case a year ago when he was equally outstanding as a sophomore. A. Virginian all the way as he migrated from. his home town of Harrisonburg where he was an all-state high school star, Sampson is considered already to be the top professional prospect among college players even though he still has another year of eligibility in the amateur ranks. Despite his height, which might have enabled him to concentrate on scoring, Sampson became at the start of his college career a valued team player who performed superbly in every in the best tradition of phase of the game. Sampson is the latest in a line of illustrious amateurs to be honored with the engraved silver plate, emblematic of the excellence required to win the Tanqueray award. Last year's achiever was running back Herschel Walker of the Georgia football team. Other recent winners have been Darryl Strawberry, the Los Angeles high school star who is expected to become a prized rookie for the New York Mets in another season or two; gold medal gymnast Kurt Thomas; high jumper Franklin Jacobs; and Olympic gold medal boxers Sugar Ray Leonard and Howard Davis.

"We believe that Ralph Sampson, who has dominated college basketball from the start of his career, will go on to achieve still greater distinction," said John Heilmann, president of Importers, Somerset Ltd., the sponsors of the Tanqueray Award. "We are proud of all of our winners. They have been standouts as amateurs and as they have gone on place toss of 153-5 made a time of 33:11.65. in their careers.
