Stress Can Cause Heartburn

If your hectic lifestyle causes you stress, you may find that you suffer from heartburn and don't understand why.

Heartburn is the backup of stomach contents into the esophagus. It is caused by a variety of factors, and stress is believed to be one of them. The reason is that stress produces acid in your stomach.

Dr. Donald O. Castell, Director, Digestive Diseases Division, and Professor of Medicine at the Uniformed Services University, offers several suggestions for relieving the symptoms of heartburn:

- Take GAVISCON®
- Stop or cut down on smoking, and especially don't smoke right after a meal
- Don't wear clothes that fit tightly around the waist
- Avoid foods that may stimulate acid secretion in the stomach, such as coffee and alcohol
- Avoid fatty foods and chocolates, as well as greasy and spicy foods
- Eat smaller, more frequent meals
- Don't lie down right after eating
- Sleep with the head of your bed raised about six inches (preferably by placing blocks under the legs at the head of the bed)
- Reduce if you're overweight
