There's summer school and then there's Summer Enrichment. Durham's Summer Enrichment Project targets students grades one through nine, who want to get ahead while waiting for school to begin in August. It is sponsored by the city schools.

The Summer Enrichment Program encourages learning through "guided freedom and exploration" based upon a belief that "learning is fun and fun is learning", according to Mrs. Audrey F. Boykin, program coordinator. "Each day is to be an academic wonderland."

Tagged "Learning, A Global Scenario", the program offers a wide range of courses designed "to go beyond those that are possible or probable in a regular class setting," Mrs. Boykins said.

Courses for elementary students — grades one through six — will be taught at Fayetteville Street Elementary School, and courses for middle and junior high students — grades seven through nine — will be dance, drama and gymnastics as well as basic courses in math, science, the social studies and computer instruction.

The program will run from June 14 through July 23, and classes will be held from 8:30 a.m. until 1 p.m., Monday through Friday. The class day will be divided into five 45-minute periods.

The program costs $80, and a $25 deposit must accompany each application. Applications must be mailed before the May 20 sign-up taught at Rogers-Herr Junior High School.

On the elementary level, students will study reading, English, math, piano instruction and foreign languages. In the higher grades, students will study writing, art,

City Council

(Continued from Front) someone comes in and the dollars are right, I'll vote to sell the land. And if rezoning is necessary, I'll vote to rezone. What we need more than anything is a plan that will work.

So proponents of the proposal have won a battle but the war of Hayti's redevelopment lingers on.

The compromise proposal is one of three that the council can approve.

One is the city's original proposal, second is the HDC original proposal, and third is the compromise proposal.

Now, with the council's apparent approval of the third proposal on the horizon, the ball is back in the black community's hands again, namely HDC.

According to an official, HDC plays better with the ball.

"We love the challenge," said Nathaniel White, Jr., executive director of HDC, "and we have developers on the line."

He added, however, "The plan does need allocation of sufficient resources to induce quality development."

So far, the council has requested the city manager to include $1.5 million for site preparations and a public safety station in Hayti. But later, the council voted to use $400,000 of that for architectural fees for a proposed downtown civic center with the instruction that the manager replace the money somehow.

Actually, White says, more than $1.5 million will be needed to implement the third proposal. The HDC group plans to request more from the city, but officials refused to say how much.

But with financing to be worked out later, before the land can be sold under North Carolina's redevelopment law, the Redevelopment Commission (the City Council in Durham's case) must approve a land use redevelopment proposal, the Planning and Zoning Commission (seven citizens appointed by the council) must review and possibly make recommendations on zoning, then the City Council must adopt the proposal, after holding a public hearing.

The council will probably approve the proposal Monday night, refer it to the Planning and Zoning commission. The proposal will probably be put before the council June 7, when citizens comments will be heard.

during her four-year stay at the institution.

In the first game with Norfolk State, the Lady Broncos dropped the Lady Spartans 4-3 as Morris, who was named the tourney's "Most Valuable Player" as well as being named to the All-CIAA softball team, went 2-for-3 at the plate.

In the second contest, the Lady Spartans of Norfolk State got three runs in the first three innings and went on to post a 4-1 victory. However, the Lady Broncos bounced back in the finale after Norfolk State grabbed a 5-0 lead in the first inning of the final contest. However, FSU rallied with three runs in the third frame and four more runs in the final three innings. Morris was a perfect 3-for-3 at the plate during this deciding game as Coach George Williams' squad nipped the Lady Spartan for the CIAA softball championship, 7-6.

Fayetteville State completed its season with an 18-6 record.

Chester Reams' Death A Mystery

man's younger brother, a woman phoned the Reams home at 1416 E. Club Blvd., and asked for Chester.

"Chester had just walked out the door," Reams said, "and I called him back. He talked on the phone and left."

Later, according to Reams, his brother called from the Econo-Travel Motel, urging that Eugene come out and meet the woman's sister.

"The woman in the room got on the phone and told me to come on," Reams said, "and it was the same woman who had called."

There is nothing, however, to indicate that another woman was at the motel, or that anyone else was called.

Apparently, shortly after 8 p.m., Chester Reams and the woman walked about a half mile to where he worked at North American Van Lines.

According to Mrs. R. Long, president, Reams and the woman came by the warehouse about 8:30 p.m. to pick up a new cap with a company logo. Reams had worked with this company for about 14 years, much of that as a truck driver. For the past three years, he worked on the loading dock because his driver's license had been permanently revoked.

"He had called me earlier and asked for a new cap," Mrs. Long said, "and I told him that he could come get one. They came in together, and we talked for a few minutes and they left."

A few minutes later, according to Mrs. Long, she saw Reams and the woman again standing in the Ramada Inn parking lot, talking to someone. Mrs. Long passed them as she left her office.

That was about 9 p.m. Meanwhile, according to Eugene Reams, he asked his neighbor, Ms. Chris Chandler of 1418 E. Club Blvd., to take him to the motel. Both of the Reams brothers lived with their mother, Mrs. Myrtle Reams, at 1416 E. Club Blvd.

"Around 10 that night, I drove Eugene to the Econo-Travel Motel on Guess Road," Ms. Chandler said during a Carolina Times interview, "and I dropped him off there about 10:20."

Eugene Reams says he knocked on the door of Room 33, opened it, looked in, saw no one, closed the door and walked to the front of the motel, headed up Guess Road to see if his brother and the woman had gone to eat.

Reams said he checked the restaurant next to the motel, but his brother wasn't there. Later, as he turned up Guess Road, walking north, he says his brother coming along the same side of the road, walking with a woman he didn't recognize.

Minutes later, according to Reams, he saw a couple walking toward him on the west side of Guess Road, the same side as the motel. Up the street, about a quarter mile, Eugene Reams said he noticed a car swing around in the road, and head back south along Guess Road, in the center lane. Guess Road at this point is four-lane in both directions.

Suddenly, according to the younger Reams, the car swerved to the right, gained speed and hit one of the two people walking along the side. Cutting the car's lights, the driver sped off along Guess Road. The victim, knocked several feet into the air, hit the ground and rolled approximately within ten feet of where Eugene Reams was standing.

"Now that I think about it," Reams said, "I remember the people in the car yelling something as they went up the road before they turned around, but I didn't hear what they said. Now, though, I believe they said what the woman said, and came back and killed my brother."

Though Reams said he talked with police before riding to the hospital with his brother, who died from a broken neck and other multiple fractures, he is not listed on the official police report as a potential court witness. Reams says he has talked with police investigators at least two times since the fatal incident.

It seems, at this point, that Reams' story substantially matches the story that police report they were told by the woman — T. Nelson (alias Patricia Reams) — who said that when the car first passed them, someone yelled: "We're going to kill you, nigger, for walking with that white woman."

However, there is at least one inconsistency to the story Eugene Reams tells, and the one the woman reportedly told police. According to the woman's story, from police reports, she and Chester Reams crossed the road after the car passed them, and someone yelled a racial epithet. But Eugene Reams says though he heard someone in the car yell something, that the two people were already on the west side of the road, walking toward him.

The woman who registered at the motel as T. Nelson, but told police she was Patricia Reams, could not be reached Tuesday.

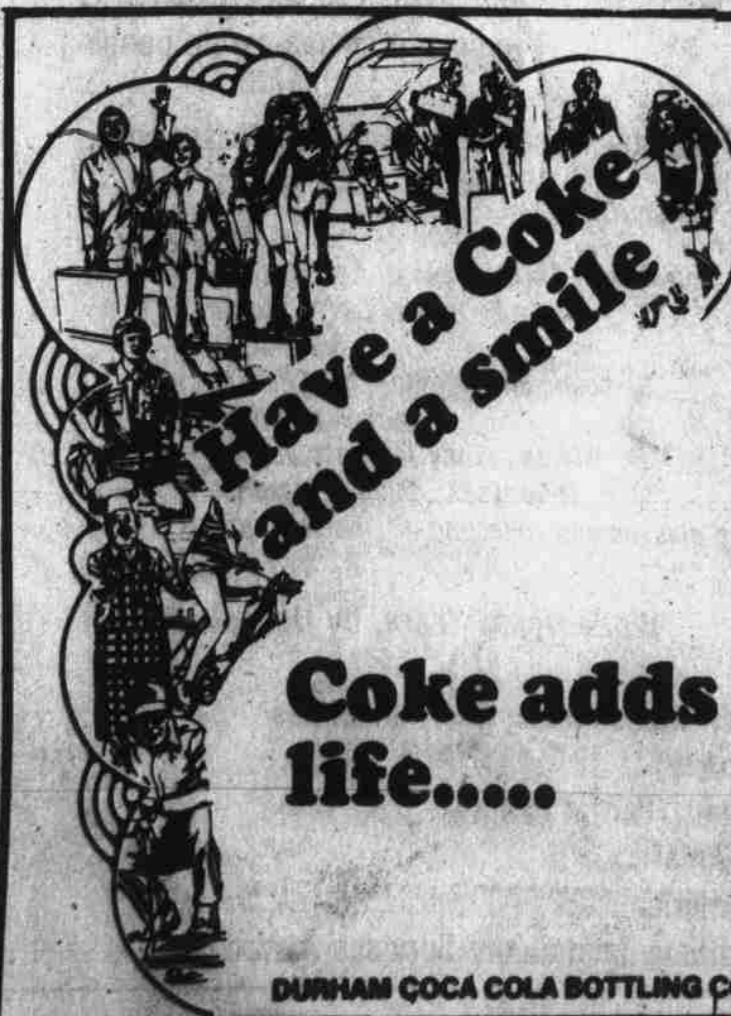

Meanwhile, at least two local organizations have called for Grimes to be charged with murder. The Durham Branch of the NAACP labeled the death a "vicious racial attack." While the Durham Support Committee for African Liberation Day sponsored a rally in front of City Hall Monday, also saying that Reams' death was racially motivated. They termed it "a modern day lynching."

But whether murder or accident, Chester Reams' mother is not surprised.

"I had heard rumors that he (Chester) was messing around with white girls," said Mrs. Myrtle Reams, "and I remember how it was before white and colored got together. Whites would kill a colored man for even looking at a white woman too hard. But I think if a black man had killed a white man, he'd be charged with murder now."

Reams was buried Saturday, May 8, but questions remain.

Apparently, there are two witnesses to the killing, both of whom appear to tell similar stories. But the police, so far, say that Reams' death was an accident.
