[THE TRUTH UNCOVERED]

May 30 - June 5, 1982

When The Negro Ensemble Company opened their 15th season recently, Seagram Distillers Company was on hand to unveil a special poster donated to the N.E.C. fund drive on behalf of Seagram's V.O. On Hand for the preview of the V.O. Salute to Black Theater in America were, from left, Gregory M. Gore, assistant Metro New York manager, Seagram Distillers; Howard Wassertein, Seagram state manager; Wenden Wray, director of the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture; Douglas Turner Ward, co-founder and artistic director of the Negro Ensemble Company; Jerry Pickney, noted American artist and creator of the V.O. poster; and Warwick V. Sealy, Seagram sales representative.

What are singers Stacy Lattisaw and Ronnie Dyson talking about? When they met at the Atlantic Records in New York City, Ronnie was telling her about his comeback after being off the scene for a while, and Stacy, a teenage star of the '80s, was telling him how happy she is for him.
