Ushers 57th Session Convenes In Fayetteville

CARRBORO — The 57th annual session of the Interdenominational Ushers Association of North Carolina will convene in Fayetteville at First Baptist Church, August 6-8. Dr. C.R. Edwards is pastor.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. on Friday. The First Aid Department program is scheduled for Friday afternoon and the welcoming program on Friday evening to be followed by the president's annual address, "How Free Are You?"

On Saturday morning, the Arts and Crafts Department, along with the Youth-Young Adults, will present their programs, displays and fashion show.

The annual business session and election of officers will be Saturday afternoon. The Oratorical Contest on Saturday evening will be followed by the banquet and Queen's Contest.

The session will conclude on Sunday morning with the annual sermon being delivered by the host pastor, Dr. Edwards.

Awards and scholarships are presented in the Queen's Contest, First Aid, Arts and Crafts and the Oratorical Contest. The Interdenominational Ushers Association of North Carolina, was organized on Easter Sunday, 1926 at the Saint Paul AME Church in Raleigh. The aims, then and now, are to: create an ecumenical fellowship where all denominations could enjoy an open relationship; restore dignity to the ushering profession; promote human relations, and, aid and assist those in need.

The organization purchased the 75-acre former Franklin Christian College property on Highway 1, north of Franklinton, in 1957. Five buildings are located on the property and future plans of the organization are to erect a retirement complex.

Clifton Stone of Carrboro serves as state president.
