The museum will close its Morgan Street (Raleigh) facility, which it has occupied for 26 years, on August 31. The grand opening of the building on Blue Ridge Boulevard is scheduled for April 5-10, 1983.

The new slide program, developed by the museum's Department of Education, will be presented by docents and staff members beginning October 1. It offers a preview of the new building, designed by internationally-renowned architect Edward Durrell Stone, with its three-story atrium and coffered ceilings. The speakers will report on the progress of the museum staff as it prepares the exhibition spaces and other public areas for the opening.

Groups who request the slide presentation will also be introduced to the collections to be installed in the galleries. For the first time, there will be permanent display areas for Greek, Roman, African and pre-Columbian art in addition to the superb European and American painting and sculpture.

"Behind-the-scenes" work by curators, conservators, designers and photographers will be discussed. In addition, the Education Department, with its new 275-seat auditorium, will announce its plans for art history courses for the general public, as well as seminars, film and music series, demonstrations and classes.

Any North Carolina organization can request the slide talk by writing the Education Department, North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh, N.C. 27607 or by calling (919) 833-1935. There is no charge for the program; however, reimbursement for nominal travel expenses may be requested.
