mitigation plan, it seemed that Crest Street residents might have won the battle.

The proposed plan calls for the relocation of about 225 families into a vacant area near the existing community. State and federal money will pay for the construction of apartments, and single family houses on this new residential site. Another developer has plans to transform an abandoned school into apartments for the elderly.

But the plan has problems, and many property owners are beginning

N. C Is Leader In Using Electronic Money

RALEIGH — North Carolina consumers and businesses are among the most active users of electronic funds transfer (EFT) services in the nation, according to the executive director of the North Carolina Automated Clearing House Association (NORCACHA).

"It's possible that on a per capita basis, this is the most EFT-intensive state in the nation," said Walter J. Woytisek in the August issue of North Carolina Magazine, published by the North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry (formerly N.C. Citizens Association).

"Only seven (of the 32) automated clearing house regions record higher monthly volumes than we do, and those include states with much higher populations — California and New York, for example.

"We estimate some 18 million electronic transfers during 1982 (in North Carolina), not including four to five million government pay and retirement benefits made electronically. That means that this year alone, there should be almost 23 million fewer checks to process than would have the case without electronics funds transfer."

In its first year of existence, 1976, the North Carolina ACH processed only 4,000 private sector credit and debit transactions.

Woytisek said a NorCACHA survey of its 137 member banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions showed over 600 companies and organizations in the state now use one or more ACH services. The most popular application is automatic payroll deposit, followed by pre-authorized payments of such recurring bills as insurance premiums and mortgage payments; and cash concentration, where daily receipts from geographically dispersed retail stores can be collected in a central overnight account.

"EFT is now in the era of diffusion," explained Woytisek in his interview. "The system is in place, it works, and customers are comfortable with the concept. We can expect the volumes of (financial) transactions conducted in this manner to move steadily higher."

Thank You Zafa Temple

Growing up as children, my brother and I were fortunate to have a grandmother who, in her own way, instilled in us reverence, respect and honor of the Mystic Order of Masons. The seed she planted grew so carefully and fully, as I now look back with pride in my brother, who is now a 33° Mason.

Today the pride is even greater. I have traveled many miles for thirteen days with the Nobles and Daughters of Zafa Temple. Through their love of God, love of man, and the love of each other as brothers and sisters, it warmed my heart and brought strong to my mind the things our grandmother had said to us.

Thanks to Zafa Temple for letting me share in their fun, their inspiring spiritual services on the bus; their warmth and brotherly love during the trip to Denver, Colorado and back.

Nobles and Daughters, You are all that grandma said you were; now in 1982.

Respectfully,
Alice M. Johnson Davis

to feel that they have been sold down the river.

A homeowner on West Pettigrew Street who asked not to be identified for fear of harassment, said: "I didn't think that the plan included this street. They said several times they would bypass this plot of land because of the West Durham Lumber Company. My husband bought this house for us and I want to stay here."

Mrs. Mildred Scarlett, who also lives on West Pettigrew Street does not believe her street and some others were always included in the original plan.

"I called downtown about five years ago and somebody told me that all they would do to my house was put up a fence behind it," she said. "I don't want to hold things up but I don't need any help in getting rid of my own property."

This last statement referred to the belief that some property owners have that negotiations between the city and state officials and the community organization neglected concerns of property owners.

Mike Calhoun of the North Central Legal Assistance Program, a legal aid organization that worked with the Crest Street Community Council on the court case, said: "It had always been the design of the expressway to take the property on West Pettigrew Street.

But interestingly, the West Durham Lumber Company is located directly in front of West Pettigrew Street just two blocks from the residents who are being forced to move, and this firm is not to be relocated.
