Coming Events

BLACK NAVY VETERANS CELEBRATION — The first reunion of World War II Black Navy Veterans of Great Lakes, marking the 40th anniversary, will be held at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois on Friday, September 24. For information contact James T. Howard, P.O. Box 327, Hyannis, MA 02601. Telephone (617) 775-5741. All Great Lakes veterans are urged to attend this first reunion.

Historically before President Franklin D. Roosevelt opened General Service to blacks in the United States Navy in 1942, they were relegated to non-combat roles, such as officers' cooks and stewards. With the blacks acceptance into the General Service, such specialties as quartermasters, signalmen, radiomen, boatswains mates, gunners mates, carpenters mates and many more were opened to them.

There were approximately 70,000 black sailors trained in segregated camps at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

CHILD AND PARENT SUPPORT SERVICES (CAPSS) is beginning its Parent Aide Training course on Saturday, September 11, 12-5 p.m., and continuing thereafter on Monday evenings through October 11.

Parent Aides work on an individual basis with actual or potentially abusive or neglectful families. Aides work with parents through telephone calls and home visits offering counseling, friendship, role-modeling and referral to community resources. Hours are flexible and can generally be arranged at the convenience of the volunteer.

Continuing Education units are offered through Durham Technical Institute for completion of the course. Training includes counseling skills, crisis intervention techniques, personality theory, family dynamics, and an overview of child abuse and neglect. For more information, please call CAPSS at 286-7112 or contact Teleministry at 683-1595 (24 hours per day).

GENEALOGY FOR BEGINNERS WORKSHOP — Durham County Library will offer a free Genealogy for Beginners Workshop, consisting of three class sessions at the library and a trip to the North Carolina State Archives in Raleigh. The class sessions will be held in the 3rd floor Conference Room at the library on Sept. 30, Oct. 7, and Oct. 14 (Thursdays) from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The trip to the Archives will be Saturday, October 23. As class size is limited to 20, pre-registration is recommended. To register, phone Ms. Anne Berkley, 683-2626.

PARENTS INVOLVED IN EDUCATION — Parents interested in becoming more actively involved in their children's education are invited to attend a meeting of Parents Involved in Education on September 14 from 7-8:30 p.m. at Lakeview Community Education Center, 3507 Dearborn Drive. PTA Fundraising ideas will be shared. For more information call Shayry Maskel at 477-2197.

THE NEW NEGRO RENAISSANCE — A series of lectures, films and seminars entitled "The 'New Negro' Renaissance: Harlem in the 'Twenties'" is being offered at the Durham County Library from September through November. This series is co-sponsored by the Duke University Office of Continuing Education and the Durham County Library and is assisted by the North Carolina Humanities Committee. The lectures and films are open free of charge to the public; the seminars are offered for a nominal fee.

Guest speakers will lecture on the emergence of black Harlem (September 15), Marcus Garvey and black nationalism (September 22), Blacks on Broadway (September 29), Jazz musicians (October 6), author Jean Toomer (October 20), and the Harlem Church (November 3). Noted writer and actress Maya Angelou will put in a special appearance at N.C. Central University on November 11, speaking on female writers of the Harlem Renaissance.

Films include an award-winning archival documentary entitled "I Remember Harlem" (September 19 and November 21), musical short features starring Duke Ellington and Bessie Smith (October 10), "The Emperor Jones," with Paul Robeson (October 10), and the silent melodrama "Scar of Shame" (October 31).

Five-week seminars on various aspects of Harlem Renaissance literature are offered in the daytime and evening and require advance registration.

Details of the entire series are available from the Office of Continuing Education, 107 Bivins, on Duke's East Campus, and main and branch Durham County Libraries. For more information call 684-6259.

THE SALLAM CULTURAL CENTER will present rhythm and blues legend John Lee Hooker & The Coast to Coast Blues Band in concert on Friday, September 10, at the St. Joseph's Performance Center, 804 Fayetteville St., in Durham. Shows will be at 8 and 10:30. The program will open with Big Boy Henry, blues guitarist and singer from Beaufort, N.C. Proceeds will benefit the Sallam Cultural Center, a non-profit organization promoting jazz and blues in the Triangle area. For ticket information, call 493-2096 or 286-3604.
